Shalom laYehudim, Shalom laBnai Noach, Shalom laGoyim. It's the evening of the 2nd day, tes-vav beIyar, tav-shin-ayin-beh, Parashas BeHar, the evening of the 1st day, Sunday, 3 May, 2015, webcasting from the land that drives men crazy.

I mean that, really. Adolf Hitler and everyone who thought like him in his day were plainly out of their minds with hatred and falsehood, fantasies of Jews doing evil that had no anchor in truth and reality.

And it is the same today. Today, we read about Jimmy Carter's latest visit here, his latest performance. He went to Ramallah and smiled and shook hands with the No. 2 in the bloody the Fatah cult, Mahmoud Abbas, and of his rival for power, Khalid Mashaal, Hamas headman, Carter said he is "strongly in favor of the peace process."

I read that and had to my shake my head and my eyes went blurry for a moment. "What?"

I think in the modern age of amazing communications equipment, we can actually see men such as Carter acting out their anti-Jewitis before our very eyes. "Khalid Mashaal is in favor of the peace process," he said? This would be like Carter in the 1920s going to Moscow, meeting with and reporting back to the States that Lenin was a liberal democrat, a free market capitalist and America should get along with him.

Who does not know that HAMAS -- its very essence -- is opposed to peace with Israel? It has shamelessly been open about that has been since the first day of its evil existence. What is going on in the mind of a Jimmy Carter when he talks this way? Has he no integrity? Has he no commitment to the truth?

This is a guy who is, as they used to say, just off his rocker. Like Hitler and all dizzy Jew-haters, Carter's mind goes, like the old pinball machines, "Tilt!" and shuts down when he thinks of Jews. The very thought of Jews for such men seems to short-circuit the synapses in their brains and they become blind to reality.

He is a slave of his hatred of the Jewish people and he is back in the country meeting with such as Abbas. Israeli officials have refused to meet with Carter. He has been traveling with the former prime ministress of Norway, surely one of the most monolithically anti-Jew societies in Europe. With so little history of Jews actually living there, these Norwegians seem to be the product of their not too distant past as pagans and their, relatively speaking, recent conversion to Christianity with its undeniable chapters and verses of hatred for guilty Jews.

Jimmy Carter, for sure, remains an active Christian as he experiences that religion. A few years ago, there was a news story of audio tapes of Jimmy Carter teaching Sunday school in Plains, Georgia, teaching his church's children of the perfidy of the Jews and in such a way it was not a historical narrative for him but current events.

And what does Israel have to say about this man and others like him? Official Israel shuns him but does not mark him for the classical, stereotypical Jew-hater that he is.

There is something timeless about this behavior. The very idea of Jews and the undeniable reality that they are not only still around and after centuries of Hell at the hands of lunatic haters, they have carried out the prophecy in their Bible of returning from exile and restoring their ancient homeland to life; men like Jimmy Carter cannot deal with this.

Yes, he attended Annapolis and studied nuclear engineering, but he remains a peanut farmer and mired in the mentality of mankind in the distant past. For there is little difference between 21st century hatred of Jews and, say, 14th century hatred of Jews when in the years 1348-49 the Black Death devastated Europe. Some estimate a third of the Continent perished, and it was a particularly terrible death. And people at the time blamed the Jews for poisoning the wells and butchered them by the thousands, of course, and of course looted their homes of all valuables as well. They moved into their homes after butchering the families.

I once worked on a documentary film about the Jews of Greece and interviewed an Auschwitz survivor who after liberation in January 1945 returned home to Salonika in northern Greece, which was the bastion of Greek Jewry, and there he found a Greek family living in his home, sitting in and using his furniture, people who refused to leave when he showed up. And in his situation, alone in the world since his wife and daughter were gassed and cremated at Auschwitz, with no other family members and no help from the Greek authorities, there were was nothing he could do, so he walked away and made his way to America.

That is how it has always been, one of the commonly overlooked facets of Jew-hatred in history. Not only are the Jews murdered, they are stripped of all their possessions. Before World War II, Vienna was maybe 25% Jewish, just like New York. Jews had businesses, homes, synagogues, department stores, doctor's offices. But today, all those buildings are in gentile hands. Most of their owners in 1939 were exterminated.

And that is what Jimmy Carter wants to happen to Israel, G-d forbid. (By the way, I have a piece on the AmericanThinker.com website today called "The Two-State Solution Deception.") This antisemitic man Carter is saying Khalid Mashaal wants peace but Netanyahu does not.

This is like being in a state of permanent intoxication that messes up your vision, blurs your vision. Hamas is even according to the notoriously anti-Israel State Department known as a terrorist organization, a criminal enterprise of murderers who are millionaires many times over because they are supported by Muslim billionaires of the Middle East for whom Jew-hatred is the nuclear core of their religion. Truly in a Marxist sense, Islam is the opiate of these masses. Marx said that about all religions, and Islam, which means submission, may fit the bill more than any other religion.

Islam dulls the mind. In the Far East, there are statues of the Buddha that display a diamond in the forehead symbolic of the "third eye of wisdom." But how different is the Muslim religionist who assumes the position at prayer of a slave, his face pressed to the floor, the forehead pressed against the floor which "piety" over time leaves a permanent black and blue mark and flattens the forehead. In the very spot of the third eye of wisdom, they blind themselves.

Islam is a form of antisemitism, so much of it plagiarized from Tanakh. It is a kind of copyright infringement, intellectual property theft, which fits that age-old Midrash beautifully that declares Ishmael a thief. It is his essence. And that Midrash is from, like, the 6th century.

Indeed, into the 20th century the Middle East was plagued by roving bands of Bedouin who thought nothing of armed robbery when coming upon a caravan of innocent travelers. Film archives contain old black and white footage from a century ago of such Arab marauders.

And as the Arabs' livelihood was conscienceless theft, burglary and armed robbery, so Muhammad less invented a religion then stole the religion of the Jews and perverted it.

And so Jimmy Carter and other Western Jew-haters in our time look at our plight, surrounded on three sides by 550,000,000 mostly Muslim Turks, Iranians and Arabs, and see them wanting peace with Israel but Israel not wanting peace with them; and certainly not doing right by the victims of their Zionism, the authentic, archaic "Palestinians" who appear nowhere in the Bible the Sunday school teacher Carter teaches his flock.

Carter and Khalid Mashaal and Mahmoud Abbas's have the same view of Israel that is positively starkers. As I show in my book, what Palestinian Nationalism has accomplished is the turning of truth on its head. In the 1950s and 60s, the violence here was seen as the Arab refusal to allow the Jews to live in peace in their own independent state in their own ancient homeland.

In 1970, though, the word "Palestinian" made its first appear in a UN document, and the rest is history. Their greatest accomplishment has been turning the truth upside down. Today, it is the Jews who refuse to let the "Palestinians," the authentic ancient owners of Palestine, to live in peace and prosperity in their (!) independent state in their (!) ancient homeland.

Palestinian Nationalism is theft of the story of Zionism.

Speaking before of the bizarre pathways of old-fashioned Jew-haters like Jimmy Carter, John Kerry was running his mouth last night as well and calling Israel's response to his and Imam Obama's plan for Iran "hysterical," and I will want to know someday what was running through Kerry's head when he said this.

Surely, he knows the plan as described in Teheran is not the plan he has in mind. And in any case, how many times does a Western state make a deal with Iran of the Ayatollahs that it has kept? Everyone these days knows Einstein's formula for insanity: doing the same thing again and again while hoping for a different result. But that is standard, operating procedure for John Kerry that tells us, according to Einstein, that he is insane. He is the hysterical one.

He was interviewed yesterday on Israeli TV Channel 10 (an excerpt from the interview to be shown this evening) from the State Department, and he pitched a scenario in which the P5+1 countries will be in such control of Iran's infrastructure, they never will be able to build a bomb. He said he believed that "where we are heading will protect Israel, not for ten years but forever."

This is the guy who a few years back was patting Bashar Assad on the shoulder as a potential partner of the U.S in the Middle East. This man has no judgment.

John Kerry is in a class with Hillary Clinton as an abyss of ambition unmatched by any merits and qualifications for the job pf Secretary of State. Kerry entered posh Yale University in the fall of 1962; Hillary Rodham entered posh Wellesley College for Women three years later. Both of them have spent almost all their adult lives in politics, never in the private sphere.

Kerry really seems to have suffered from a spiritual tidal wave of ambition to do what he did to gain attention in the early 1970s as the leader of Viet Nam Vets against the War. He was the male counterpart to Jane Fonda. She flew off to identify with the Communists in North Vietnam, and Kerry flew off to Paris to meet with the Communist Viet Cong there.

He smeared his former comrades in arms as war criminals. There is good reason to believe too that his service in the military in Viet Nam was calculated from Day One to launch his political career. There is reason to believe his medals and commendations were phony.

And then as a senator in Washington, what did he ever do or say that was memorable? One of his critics said his greatest accomplishment was consistency: he was wrong on every foreign issue as he rose to become chair of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee, largely on the strength, I think, of his physicality: his height, posh speech and baritone voice.

Underneath, though, he remains an empty suit; like Clinton, with no record of accomplishments, no memorable opinion pieces on foreign policy.

Empty suits; they are representatives of the time. They are the rotten fruit of the lunatic 1960s. And in a way - though he was boy at the time -- so is Barack Obama, having later on befriended Bill Ayres and Bernadine Dohrn two of the most reprehensible members of that generation.

This was the Baby Boom generation, my generation. At the end of World War, there were 11 million men in uniform. Peace with Japan was signed September 2, 1945, and within 24 hours these millions began to demobilize, take off their uniforms and go home. The government did not want to pay for them one day more than was necessary.

These young men, went home, married, and nine months later the delivery rooms in hospitals all across America were full steam ahead, 24-7, with babies being born.

America was then not only the victor but the only major country left intact. Its factories, its industrial plant, unlike Britain, France, Germany and Japan, all in ruins.

The U.S. was rich and ultimately spoiled. They said the Baby Boomers were the best generation ever – that's what they told us – only, I think, to be shipwrecked in the 1960s with too much sex, drugs and rock and roll.

It was the golden age of television during which a handsome John Kennedy defeated a dark and forbidding Richard Nixon. Famously, those who heard their debate in 1960 campaign on radio thought Nixon won; those who watched on TV thought Kennedy had won and thus was born the Age of Images on TV.

And thus was the path begun toward the rise of Barack Hussein Obama who was a wizard of speechifying with his Teleprompters, spewing bromides but doing it with such confidence and flare, sounding white, dramatically pausing here and there. Talk about an empty suit.

As the culture has grown ever more vapid, so its leaders are underneath nobodies. No original thoughts; no strong values, no principles. That was the word on Hillary from her boss during the Watergate investigation. The woman had no limits to her desire. What mattered was the goal and to Hell with the law; this from the recent valedictorian at Yale Law School where she met slick Willy, soul-mate in ambition to make it big in politics, and to Hell with principles and beliefs, policies not important.

I don't think any of these three, Obama, Clinton and Kerry, believes in anything except their own success. Kerry is no more a judge of the Iranians than he was of Bashar al-Assad.

Unlike other senators who succeeded in business before entering politics, Kerry has been a public servant like Bill Clinton all his adult life.

None of them cares about the American people. All they care about is themselves.

Indeed, the workings of mind infected and paralyzed by hatred of the Jews leads to fantasies of evil deeds they allegedly commit and the inversion of notions of good and evil.

Carter sees in Khalid Mashaal a man ready for peace with Israel and sees Prime Minister Netanyahu as his opposite who does want peace.

And now we learn of a play, a piece for the theater, created by The Freedom Theater Company established in 2006 during the second intifada and located in Jenin's UNRWA area that sees as its mission "to generate cultural resistance through the fields of popular culture and art as a catalyst for social change in the occupied Palestinian territories."

The key word here is "resistance" which is code for resisting the right of the Jews to be free.

This theater group is of course funded by Western charitable organizations, and the play they have created is called "The Siege" and is about to run in several cities in the UK; in London, Leeds, Birmingham Nottingham and Glasgow, and it presents its version of the 39-day siege of the Church of the Nativity in Bethlehem in 2002 when scores of the sons of desert marauders, disguised as "Palestinian freedom fighters," held out against the IDF while holding some 200 priests, nuns and civilians inside as hostages. They ripped up Bibles to use as toilet paper; they used the baptismal font as a bathroom sink. They placed forty bombs all around the sanctuary to deter an IDF raid until, after 39 days, a deal was worked out to free their hostages and let themselves be taken from the country and sent into exile.

According to one report on this theater event, a central character in the play is Ibrahim Abayat who three months before the siege was responsible for the murder of an Israeli businessman, Avi Boaz, b"y, who had done business with the people of Bethlehem for years and was a known advocate for them and the so-called Palestinian cause. No matter. He was murdered.

And of course given the production by this theater group funded by European anti-Jews, the play will not shine a spotlight on who these evil barbarians, those PLO thugs, were, who held all those people hostage and left the Church of the Nativity a shambles. The play for sure will be like the opera by John Adams called The Death of Klinghoffer, not The Murder of Klinghoffer, in which again the evil ones will be objects of sympathy.

"Sympathy for the Devil." That is the title of a chapter in my book for the year 1969, when the Rolling Stones sang a song with that name at a concert in California during which a drug-crazed member of the audience was killed during the performance by a member of the gang of borderline psychotics aptly called the Hell's Angels.

'Sympathy for the Devil' is what the Palestinian National movement has been all about.

1969 was quite a year. There was the Bacchanalian drug and rock music festival called Woodstock; the landing of men on the moon; the initial outburst of Gay Liberation meant to throw holy water on sodomy, and the first mention of the Balestinians in a UN document. What a year.

Wasn't that a time? And of that time one of its lasting products has been the "Palestinian" cause which reverses the polarity between good and evil, between bullies and their victims; between the good guys and the bad guys. It is all messed up.

Khalid Mashaal and his Muslim Brothers want peace, says Jimmy Carter and Netanyahu and the Jews do not.
