Shalom laYehudim, Shalom laBnai Noach, Shalom laGoyim. It's the evening of the 2nd day, heb beTammuz, tav-shin-ayin-heb, Parashas Khukas, the evening of the 1st day, Sunday, 21 June 2015, webcasting from the last place on earth where Jew-killing remains legit.

We had another on Friday. A Jew was hiking for fun in Benjamin's tribal land with a friend. I think they were in their car afterwards when they were flagged down by an Ishmaelite signaling them for help or something.

So Danny Gonon, 25, who was later described as the nicest guy, slowed down. The Ishmaelite walked up to him at the wheel, surprised him with a gun and shot four bullets into him and murdered him and wounded his friend less seriously before running off.

Following Shabbos, Danny was laid to his eternal rest, the latest Jewish shahid/martyr to Jewishness slain by yet another violent Hamitic monster on two legs without a conscience.

No, let me take that back. I know nothing of this man's conscience. What I do know is that he has been told that the Jews are the most evil people on earth, told this by his spiritual teachers, the priests of Islam. And for sure he also has heard that the Jews steals Palestine from Palestinians like himself. Of course he shot him dead.

Indeed, the very next day the foreign minister of France, born a Jew but raised a Roman Catholic, was in Egypt where he told the Egyptians about his plan, France's plan, to take the management of the peace processor away from the United States and give it to the UN Security Council which will pass a resolution whose text he has been working on calling for all hundreds of thousands of Jews living in Judea and Samaria to be driven from their homes on such and such a date, including all the Jews living in Jerusalem on land that was in Muslim hands until 1967.

And maybe, who knows, the attempted Jew-killing today in Jerusalem was stimulated by the visit this afternoon by this very same Laurent Fabius come to tell our prime minister the same thing.

The Prime Minister this morning in the weekly cabinet meeting said he would “fight fiercely” any plan to impose a solution by any outside party. Only face-to-face negotiations are acceptable, he said.

Whatever the influence or atmosphere generated by the appearance of this antiJew Jew from France, land of the Dreyfus Affair, or not, another homicidal Arab savage pounced from the back on a Border Guard soldier outside Damascus Gate in Jerusalem. The barbarian apparently, like a fighter throwing a combination of punches, was able to very quickly stab the soldier several times, in the neck and the chest, the blade of one strike even into the heart.

But the soldier, amazingly, was still able to cock his gun and shoot the wild ass of a man several times, dropping him, before losing consciousness.

First responders found the two of them lying in blood. They did life-saving procedures and sped both of them off to the hospital. The soldier arrived on the threshold of death and was operated on even in the ER, I think, and by evening was reported to be stable and no longer moments from death.

The chances are excellent he is a Druse who dominate in the Border Patrol. We'll know soon enough.

Some commentators point to the onset of Ramadan today as an explanation for this violence but I have my doubts. There is always a reason, 24-7, to fantasize murdering Jews. At this moment there are surely some Arabs here doing just that. And from time to time the fantasy propels some of them to act it out.

Interestingly enough, this 24-7 motivation is never raised in Israel. It is one of the great taboos.

For example, as we look at another top story here, consider Israel's response to last Thursday's statement in the UN Security Council by Secretary-General Ban Ki Moon, a worthy representative of the antisemitic United Nations, who addressed the Council in the matter of a special report being prepared on the harm done to children in conflict zones in which only one country was named. Guess which one.

In an initial draft of this report authored by an Algerian woman, whose people are among the most violent and savage on earth, Israel was compared in its treatment of Ancient Palestinian children to Boko Harum infamous for kidnapping hundreds of Christian girls, forcing them to convert and marrying them against their will, which in practice means raping them all the time.

That specific comparison was removed from the first draft after protests by Israel, but in the end, during his speech last Thursday, Ban Ki Moon did single out

Israel among all the nations of world for special condemnation for Israel's crimes against children in conflict zones, referencing last summer in Gaza.

Ban Ki Moon did mention the terrible abuse of children in the Central Africa Republic, Iraq, Nigeria, South Sudan and Syria, but he called on one country only to stop its actions. "I urge Israel to take concrete and immediate steps to protect and prevent the killing and maiming of children and to respect the special protections afforded to schools and hospitals."

Israel's ambassador Rob Prossor later complained that Israel was fighting a defensive war at the time against a terrorist organization that was launching rockets into Israeli civilian areas. Evidently, this was not mentioned either in the report or by Ban Ki Moon in his speech. Prossor said the report was "politicized and stained with special interests and distorts reality." He called for "an investigation into the actions of the Secretary-General's office and the authoress of the report, complaining about the manner in which the report was prepared."

Well, as I say, this is an example of how Israel responds to such accusations and really has yet to figure out how to answer them.

There is one response that we never hear from Israel that goes to the Achilles Heel of the people of Israel today, of Herzl's post-Jewish State of Israel, leastwise its ruling class. Not one word is ever spoken from a Ron Prossor or any Israeli leader that antisemitism is at work here, which is telling whopping lies about Jews and accusing us of being the most evil people the world, accusations with no basis in reality or truth.

Israeli diplomats routinely do not use the word "antisemitism" to describe what is said about us. They never point out the delusional reality. Instead, they protest the manner in which such a report was prepared. They call for an investigation when no investigation is needed. The facts are plain. The State of Israel has become the last piece of dry land on Planet Earth where the random murder of Jews is experienced as no crime and even a praiseworthy activity.

Not until the French Revolution in Europe did Jews enjoy the rights and protections of citizens. Everywhere they lived on sufferance and the whims of the gentile overlords who told them where they could and could not live. And today we are murdered because the goyim tell us we have no right to live in Judea and Samaria. And because we do not obey their prohibition, they understand completely, for example, the firing of rockets and mortars at random out of Gaza into Jewish homes and villages, into Jewish playgrounds for children. About this, the Nations United says nothing.

It was Sharia law for centuries that one could attack a Jew and he was forbidden to fight back. He could run away, but not fight back. And so the UN has become in effect an arm of sharia by chastising Israel for returning fire into Gaza. How dare they?

Interesting too in Ban Ki-Moon's address was the egregious distortion of reality and truth. His admonition to Israel to pay special attention to schools and hospitals reflects a blindness to the truth that Israel always does that -- when the school or hospital has not been turned into an arsenal of weapons used against us. This admonition by Ban Ki Moon is a sign that all of Israel's precautions in the end can go for naught. The goyim pay no attention. They act as if Israel did not pay special attention to schools and hospitals. Israel, the IDF, has every square meter of Gaza mapped out and identified, every one of its buildings.

And here is the Nations United Against Us acting as if this was not true. It is the Arabs who deliberately blow themselves up in fast food restaurants favored by Jewish families with children, but it is Israel that gets accused of the callous, even deliberate maiming and killing of children.

Some day, G-d willing, Israelis will wake up and realize that all the reasons that they are hated are antisemitic fantasies, this generation's versions, as such fantasies have plagued us in all generations past.

Yeah, Prime Minister Netanyahu late last Thursday issued a statement responding to the speech earlier in the day in New York given by Ban-Ki Moon to the UN Security Council. He used the word "hypocrisy" for comparing the abuse of children by Syrians and the collateral damage to children in Gaza last summer to Israel and the singling out by name of Israel for a public scolding about not harming children in conflict zones.

Netanyahu called it "a black day for the United Nations. There is no limit to the UN's hypocrisy."

But again -- not having seen the full text of his statement -- I reckon as well that Bibi did not use the term "antisemitism," let alone Jew-hatred which is what this behavior is all about.

Indeed, I reject the prime minister's description that this was a Black Day for the UN. I say, "No way. It was a routine day." There was nothing black about it, for as my research shows, Jew-bashing is virtually a daily occurrence at the UN. I discovered that between 1945 when the UN opened its doors and 1989, almost half a century, over 55,000 anti-Israel votes were recorded, each one from a member-state turning thumbs down on the one Jewish state. Thirty per cent of all UN resolutions in that period were about Israel, and so last Thursday it was a ritual performance as routine as daily mass in a busy Catholic church. There is something ritualistic about this, and one would think that after all these years, the Prime Minister of Israel would be neither shocked nor indignant at such a performance.

This is why Israel needs to mature and outgrow the worst of the otherwise wonderfully successful secular Zionist movement and mindset that brought Eretz Yisrael back to life. It was a wonderful movement but it went so far and no further. And it also failed at its stated goals, failed completely, for what propelled the Zionists was the belief that evacuating Europe would put an end to the hostility. We would get out of everyone's hair and the antisemitism evaporate like the morning fog over San Francisco Bay.

Only, clearly, that has not happened, and there is no denying today's rising tide of Jew-hatred disguised as pity for the Ancient Palestinians forced to trade places with the Wandering Jews. Yeah, the Jews had a right to a state of their own but not at the price of getting the Ancient Palestinians to take their places as homeless, stateless victims of a racist ideology.

JPost reported today that in Cologne, Germany, the city fathers have reversed themselves and nullified a decision made last week not to allow those Israeli antisemites in Breaking the Silence group to exhibit their lies.

Cologne, JPost said, has seen many anti-Israel exhibits over the years. It originally had planned to show the BTS group's antisemitic display alleging, just like Ban Ki-Moon, IDF war crimes against the victims of Zionism, scheduled for this fall, but the Israeli Embassy persuaded the municipality to cancel the exhibit.

But then last Tuesday the city said it would permit the exhibit in the spring of next year in some other context. Cologne, remember, was also in the news in recent years for the construction of one of the largest mosques in Europe, and the opposition to it at the time which failed. It was completed and was meant to compete in size with the famous Gothic cathedral there.

We had a similar situation back in 1999 when Prime Minister Ehud Barak put a stop to the building of a mosque in Nazareth after the Catholic Church complained. It too was meant to compete in size right next door to the Basilica of the Annunciation.

That's Ishmael all right. In both locales, he is a constant aggressor against others.

In Cologne, the situation over the BTS is even worse, for according to one German journalist who monitors antisemitism, one Alex Feuerherdt, the two major newspapers there, the Kolner Stadt-Anzeiger and the Suddeutsche Zeitung support the BTS group and even –fasten your seat belts – blame Jews for antisemitism and not the antisemites themselves. These newspapers, he said, "give the irrational antisemitic resentment a rational basis by claiming that the city of Cologne subjugated itself to the power of the Jewish state when it pulled the plug on that exhibit."

You got that? Israel protests this antisemitic display of lies, the City agrees to remove it, and by agreeing "subjugates itself to the Jewish state." No wonder antisemitism is on the rise when the state of the Jews forces a German city to do its bidding.

So Israel complained to the UN about the bias in that report penned by that Muslim woman from Algeria, complained about the secrecy in which it was put together which excluded Israeli input.

But Israel never says anything of the age-old, functionally hallucinatory fantasies of Jewish evil that do not exist. Israel says nothing of the functionally psychotic denial at the UN when the UN complains about Israel's alleged refusal to respect schools and hospitals, and says nothing of the rocket barrages shot from those schools and hospitals that trigger Israel's self-defense.

In every generation, hostility to the Jews is a form of mental illness, the casting out of inner demons and devils from the gentiles onto the Jews; a functionally delusional mindwork that distorts reality.

The very idea of Jews, and Whom they represent, rattles men's souls.

Yeah, Cologne in Deutschland seems to be a place where Christendom is under attack, like elsewhere in Europe, attacked by Muslims; and perhaps in fear and frustration the Germans strike out at the Jews, as Germans have done so often in their history. The Holocaust was not the first time Germans went crazy over Jews and massacred them big time.

And one suspects it is that awareness by Germans of their own shrinking community that triggers this behavior. Like other Europeans, they are committing suicide by not reproducing, as the Muslims all around them do like rabbits. How convenient to strike out at the Jews and paint us as war criminals.

It is happening all over Western Europe. Last week, the excellent Italian journalist Giulio Meotti reported on Israel National News that in the UK some 10,000 churches have already shut their doors in past years and another 4,000 are expected to close over the next five years, leastwise that is what the Spectator was reporting, the venerable British magazine, that predicted the end of Christianity all together in Britain over the next 50 years.

Even more immediate, only 17% of Brits these days identify with the C of E, the official Church of England, down from 21% three years ago. At this rate, there will be no Anglicans 18 years from now.

At the same time, over the last three years, the number of Muslims is believed to have increased by a million. The former Archbishop of Canterbury Lord Carey has said another generation and Christianity in England will be extinct.

And one can only wonder what that will mean for the people there who are not Muslims. Sharia law has a record 14 centuries long of its treatment of infidels and it is not a pretty one.

One does not even have to dig into that history. Meotti reports that Mosul, which before the current collapse of Iraq was home to 60,000 Christians and over 45 churches, today has no Christians, and all of those churches have been desecrated and turned into mosques. All 60,000 Christians have fled, and all their homes have been confiscated and taken over by Muslims.

On the Gatestone site, journalist Raymond Ibrahim, whose father is an Egyptian Copt and was a long-time reporter for the New York Times and Wall Street Journal, keeps track of Christian communities in the world where they are being murdered in their churches. This has happened in the Central African Republic, in Kenya, Nigeria, Pakistan, Uganda, and there are more.

Which information I take to be yet another piece of evidence that the President of the United States not only lied when he said, “You can keep your doctor if you like,” but also when he has said he was a Christian. If he were a Christian, one might think he would say something about these horrors and propose some kind of action, but of course he says nothing.

This is man a Muslim dissembler. That big smile of his is the phony smile of a con man who conned an entire country.

I think he is the greatest enemy agent in the history of enemy agents who sweet-talked his way into taking over the enemy country in order to destroy it.

What a turn of events.
