Shalom laYehudim, Shalom laBnai Noach, Shalom laGoyim. It's the evening of the 2nd day, yud khet Menachem Av, tav-shin-ayin-heh, Parashas Ekev, the evening of the 1st day, Sunday, 2 August 2015, webcasting from the hills of Judea, homeland of the Jews, devotees of the G-d of Mt. Sinai which means My Hatred.

So you all know of the violence here since last week. A psychopath stabbed six people in the Sodomites on Parade parade on Thursday and one of them died today.

Not surprisingly, a tsunami of hatred swelled up for Jews who live according to the Torah miSinai, literally the Teaching of My Hatred, when in a healthier, less anti-Jew culture there should have been a tsunami of fury at the police and judicial system which let him out after being convicted of attempted murder the first time in that parade in 2008, and charges of malpractice for not escorting him at all times, for not frisking him, when he was evidently carrying that big knife. The incompetence and injustice done by the agencies of law and order in this matter is simply intolerant. In a healthier Jewish community, there should have been an uproar at the astonishing negligence.

This man Yishai Shlissel is clearly as sexually wrapped too tight as the sodomites and lesbians whose behavior he rejects. I have come to think of sexual perversion as an addiction and really the most tenacious of all addictions. Morphine is a heroin derivative and morphine is phonetically a cousin of the word endorphin, which the pituitary gland in the brain pumps out, the pleasure hormone, and I think one can become as addicted to one's own endorphins as to morphine/heroin.

It is a known, terrible truth so far, that male pedophile predators attacking little boys are incurable, and I suggest that Mr. Shlissel is as twisted up inside sexually about sodomy as the sodomites he fights against.

In any case, he seems to be a true sociopath, meaning a pathogen on society. With the wisdom of hindsight, he never should have been released from prison, certainly not so quickly as he was for attempted murder. The Israeli legal system let him go and, whaddaya know, this time his attempt at murder succeeded.

That is where Israel's rage today should be. Instead, his satanic attack became another opportunity to bash Orthodox Judaism, which makes no sense whatsoever. On the contrary, this eruption of evil by this one man highlights the generality of Orthodox behavior that is not at all violent toward sodomites and/or Arabs.

And then we have the horror of that other story from Friday, later on -- which has yet to be proven -- that of two young Jews fire-bombing an Arab home which resulted in the burning to death of a baby, with two of his siblings fighting for their lives now.

Here too the behavior of one or two Jewish slaves of evil who deserve to be executed for that murder -- if that is the case -- has been instantaneously turned into a symbol of hundreds of thousands of religious Jews who dare to live beyond the 1949 ceasefire that went out of business in 1967. One individual, two individuals, and an entire community is smeared.

In JPost, Yossi Melman's opinion -- he is a veteran leftist Arab terrorism expert -- appeared under the headline "We Must Crush Jewish Terrorism" as if there is so much of it.

And last night thousands of Israelis came together in Tel-Aviv and Jerusalem and Haifa to shake their fists at the Jewish religion for its "homophobia" and religious nationalism responsible for that fire-bombing.

President Rivlin in Jerusalem's Zion Square last night -- a provincial middlebrow if there ever was one -- likewise spoke out against "the flames of violence, flames of hatred, flames of false, distorted and twisted beliefs, are spreading in our land."

Puh-leeze. Every once in a while, too often, a Jew crosses the line, and world antiJewry blames Judaism the religion and Religious Zionism instead of the individual lunatic. Here was Ruvy Rivlin and his audience in full "fear of the goyim" mode identifying with gentile antiJews and agreeing that "the flames of hatred are spreading."

This is in a class with "all Jews are guilty for crucifying Jesus."

The Jewish people are experienced as some kind of beehive or anthill in which the community operates as one organism, like the Borg on Star Trek. There are no Jewish individuals, only Jewish drones working for the collective in a massive conspiracy. Like Adolf Hitler who believed that both the Kremlin and the White House during World War II were controlled by the Jews, Jewish Bolsheviks and Jewish Bankers, Capitalists. Communism and Capitalism were only ruses that the Jews used to fool and dominate the world.

On the one hand, there is satisfaction in this guilt-flinging at the Jewish collective for it was foreseen in the Bible. There is the famous episode in the Book of Joshua when his soldiers are warned to take not booty, one does, and the entire people is punished.

On the other hand, this behavior it is a perennial headache.

Uncle Shimon a.k.a. Saint Simon of Oslo of the Gentiles, beloved by the Gentiles who gave him a Nobel Prize in Oslo for promising the heart of the Holy Land to the greatest Jew-killer since Hitler, Uncle Shimon last night, the ex-president, addressed the crowd in Tel-Aviv and spoke of “dark, extremist forces threatening to destroy the State of Israel and called on all Israelis to confront and rebuff them.” He said Israel has to fight a “war of liberation from madness and madmen, it is a confrontation between those with a conscience and thus without a conscience. There can be political compromises in a democratic state but not moral compromises. Morality cannot be compromised. Israel is facing a battle of survival!”

It is an attitude like this that drove yours truly finally from the company of the left. I could no longer stomach their obnoxious habit of seeing all those who oppose their ideas as immoral, bad, evil people. Moral people are found only on the Left side of the political spectrum. Peace Now, the very name, insinuates that those who do not agree with Peace Now do not want peace now.

And here is Peres in typical fashion insinuating that there is a vast conspiracy of evil people fanning the flames of hatred, when there is no fanning at all. Israelis need no fanning to form a negative opinion of Arabs, and in any case, what politician does that? I know of no politician in this country who stirs up hatred for Arabs. Not one. The right rightly fears the Arabs on the basis of their behavior but that is not the same as “fanning the flames of hatred.”

Overall, it has been a miserable past few days. The horror of that stabbing attack, the horror of that death by fire of that Arab infant, which licensed, and hardly for the first time, the Ishmael-clones in Judea and Samaria to flip out, teenagers to wrap their heads and faces in their desert keffiyas and throw rocks and Molotov cocktails at civilians and police and soldiers in a slew of locations since Friday.

The firebombing also licensed Dr. Mogherini in Brussels, head of foreign policy for the continent of Europe, to urge Israel to show “zero tolerance” after that attack in the Arab village of Duma.

Grazie, Dottore. Without your admonition to show zero tolerance for settler violence, we wouldn’t do that, would we? We needed your moral guidance. Until now, official Israel tolerated such settler violence all the time.

The EU’s ambassador on the ground here Lars-Faaborg-Andersen all said the attackers were presumed to be “extremist settlers.” And how many of them are there, would you say, Mr. Ambassador?

Dr. Mogherini called on Israel to “protect the local population,” and why? Because it is common knowledge that the settlers never stop abusing the Palestinians – and never mind the statistics of alleged settler aggression versus the statistics of homicidal Arab aggression against us. There is no comparison.

Last summer, three yeshiva boys were kidnapped and murdered. Jews since then have been shot dead passing by in their cars, and countless stoning attacks by Arabs against civilians, soldiers and police. About that kind of violence Dr. Mogherini is silent.

This is the face of European antisemitism today.

Yeah, the horrible fire-bombing on Friday, possibly perpetrated by one or more Jews, has stirred world antiJewry, Jewish and non-Jewish alike, to rise in indignation at, in the words of the UN Secretary-General Ban Ki Moon, “repeated acts of settler violence and Israel’s illegal settlement policy.”

One or two Jews -- and it still may turn out to be a non-Jewish crime -- are believed to be the perpetrators of this horrible crime, and at fault is Israel’s “illegal settlement policy.”

Yeah.

Somebody has got set this South Korean bootlick of the Arabs straight as to the legality of Israel’s resurrection of Jewish life in Judea and Samaria. Nothing could be more legal and moral than that.

But, for some mysterious reason or reasons, official Israel never does that.

In a related way, there was an op-ed in JPost today by Manfred Gerstenfeld, a prolific expert on Europe and West European Jewry in particular, entitled, “Government ignorance of the propaganda war against Israel,” in which he wrote of his efforts to prod successive Israeli governments to take cognizance of the anti-Israel, really antisemitic, mindset in Europe in our time and the necessity of combatting it.

He referenced a meeting he had a few years ago with the heads of two ministries here on the state of Israel’s public diplomacy in Europe and discovered that one director-general said his ministry has not yet come to a conclusion regarding whether or not anti-Israelism was a new form of antisemitism. Said Gerstenfeld, “The statement shocked me.”

In other words, some Israelis still don’t get it. The Zionist movement was fantastically successful in resurrecting our ancient homeland and repopulating it with the largest Jewish community in the world nowadays but failed completely as a remedy for the antisemitism that ignited the movement.

That is still around, only now it has transitioned from 19th and 20th century pseudoscience to a “war of national liberation by the victims of Zionism, who daily are abused by extremist settlers representing a racist, fascist, colonialist ideology that has stolen an entire country from an innocent, entire, Paleolithic pastoral Palestinian people.”

Gerstenfeld’s public opinion research revealed that of 400 million adults in Europe, 150 million believe Israel is conducting a war of extermination against the Palestinians. In 2004, during the height of second intifada, Gerstenfeld discovered that 68% of the adults in Germany thought Israelis were acting like Nazis.

He also mentioned Europeans friendly to Israel who have also tried and failed to get official Israel to take action against the “narrative” in Europe but to no avail.

It’s what I talked about last week. Israelis are constitutionally incapable of claiming the right to live in Judea and Samaria, defending themselves, really. All they ever do is say they want to make a deal and share the spoils of war with the Palestinians -- providing Israel’s security concerns are taken into account.

This is taurine excreta. Like two ships passing in the night, our antagonists reject any right on our part to bargain over anything. It is settled history and truth that in two stages, in 1948 and again in 1967, Israel stole 100% of Palestine and must hand back, as Abu Mazen demands, at least 22% -- that is, Judea and Samaria in his mistaken calculation -- and of course the Temple Mount in toto. No deal can ever be acceptable to the Arabs that does not include their 100% ownership of Haram a-Sharif. Ehud Barak made Arafat the offer in 2000 of freezing the status quo, Palestinian ownership of the Temple Mount on top but not of the Western Wall down below and not of the Jewish Quarter that in 1967 was in Muslim hands.

But Arafat said, “No way.” Islam preaches that any territory once in Muslim hands is Muslim forever, so no sharing is possible.

I think there is a little bit in every secular Israeli from left to right of the Tsipi Livni-Yossi Beilin school of thought according to which our conflict with what they blindly call the Palestinians is a political struggle and not a religious one. Leastwise that is what they want to believe, as surely as they cannot believe in the perdurability of old-fashioned Jew-hatred into the 21st century in Europe and how it applies to them, with the great mystery being in this equation the role played by their ignorance vs. their fearful denial.

* * (Musical Interlude) *

Yeah, the endless war against us here, a theme of my book, has nothing to do with statehood for the Palestinians but statehood for the Jews that is Islamically intolerable. I think people in the West are themselves so de-religionized, they find it hard to grasp the depth of the religious dimension, the religious factor here, in the hearts and minds of our enemies here, the Muslims.

Maybe news today of a new 416-page book will change their minds penned by El Supremo in Iran Ayatollah Khamenei called Falastin, which already makes the statement – just that name and the size of that book -- that uppermost on El Supremo’s mind is the existence of Israel.

Barack Hussein Obama as well in his first inaugural hinted at his obsession with the Jews and his desire to replace them in the States by Muslims, and the next day as president made his first phone call to the Holocaust Denier.

For Obama and Khameini and so many Muslims, their No. 1 goal in life is to destroy Israel. They are obsessed with our existence. Israel's existence does not let them sleep at night. And as such it is a religious hatred, which makes perfect sense, for Islam, even more than Christianity, is a form of antisemitism. Jew-hatred for sure is basic to the Gospels but it is not the only face of Christianity. Christendom has been for 2,000 years a great civilization, versus Islam that never was.

By contrast, Islam without Jew-hatred is nothing. In this book, Khameini evidently also makes clear that other countries once dominated by Islam must return to the fold. India must be Muslim-ruled again, as the sub-continent was as in the days of the Mughal Empire.

Parts of Russia and for sure two-thirds of Iberia too. Maybe you remember the line of dialogue in Lawrence of Arabia in which Faisal, played by Alec Guinness, sighs over the loss of and desire to regain Cordova, in Spain. And then recall how that Muslim after 9-11 wanted to build a mosque near the ruins of World Trade Center and call it Cordova House or something.

In Cordova, the great mosque there was turned into a cathedral, nicknamed in Spanish La Mesquita, which is the Spanish corruption of the Arabic word for "mosque," masjid (in Hebrew misgad) and in recent years Church officials have had to summon the police when busloads of Muslim tourists entered and went down on their faces and knees to pray as Muslims as if the cathedral were still a functioning mosque and would be again.

So it is maybe a good thing that Khameini has published his book in which he foresees the scenario I have described numerous times, almost. He says he will be content not to drop an atomic bomb on Israel – thank you very much -- but will settle for constant harassment by Hezbollah and HAMAS in order to make living in Israel unbearable so the Jews will flee.

This is why Obama did nothing to support the anti-government protestors in Iran when their victory at the polls was stolen in 2009. This is why he wants to give Iran 150 billion dollars. Iran is uniquely the power in the Middle East that can bring down Israel, G-d forbid, which desire burns in the heart of all serious Muslims today.

Obama promised he was going to fundamentally change the United States, and judging by his first inaugural address and his first phone call as president, stabbing Israel in the back was the first major change he had in mind.

Let us hope that Bibi was right last week when he was quoted in the weekend papers that opposition to Obama's Iran deal is growing in the States. It seems as if all is lost at the UN in the matter of removing sanctions but it still may be possible to cripple his attempt to send them 150 billion dollars from their US bank accounts frozen since 1979.

This guy Obama is an enemy of the U.S. and an enemy of Israel and the West who must be fought and defeated.
