Shalom laYehudim, Shalom laBnai Noach, Shalom laGoyim. It's the evening of the 2nd day, bes-beElul, Parashas Shoftim, the evening of the 1st day, Sunday, 16 August 2015, webcasting from the last country in the world where Jew-killing is praiseworthy.

Precisely because Israel has stubbornly refused to insist that Judea and Samaria rightfully belong to the State of Israel and the goyim there will be respected as individuals but not allowed to vote in the Knesset, Dr. Federica Mogherini, speaking for the Continent of Europe, says nothing when Jews are the targets of murderers. Only when a Jew kills an Ancient Palestinian imposter does she and the world chastise the Jews for being in illegal occupation of land that belongs to the Balestinian people -- none of whom, by the way, are Jewish. As my book shows, the invention of the Palestinians was the very theft of the concept of Palestine as the exclusive property of Arabs, of Muslim Arabs, Christian Arabs, some would say Druse Arabs, with Jews excluded. Since the 1970s, the very word Palestine has become the exclusive property of the "Palestinians," none of whom are Jews. when a generation earlier only the Jews were called "Palestinians." How about that?

What has happened since then has been a kind of shift in the tectonic plates of evolving history. For two thousand years, the Jews were looked upon as wanderers, evil wanderers, condemned to wander for they had been exiled from the Land that G-d had given them for having killed God, as the common man would say.

For two thousand years, no other nation on the planet took the place of the Jews as the authentic owners and really the definers of Palestine. My book shows what Palestine looked like before the First World War and it was the Biblical map. But it had no connection to anything on the ground. Palestine had become a synonym for the Biblical land promised to the Jews. The Jewish story defined the boundaries of Palestine.

For two thousand years, no other nation used that map, though, and no other nation ruled from its capital, Jerusalem. In every year in those two thousand years, Jerusalem was no more than a provincial pilgrimage town. For four centuries prior to the First World War, the Turks ruled from Istanbul, and as my book shows, they had their own map that bore no resemblance to the Biblical one of Palestine. They recognized no jurisdiction called Falastin.

But since the 1970s, in a brilliant, evil maneuver, world anti-Jewry in a way has out-denied the Holocaust Deniers. They deleted from history some of the activities of the German regime over the dozen years of its existence. But in the matter of the putatively Paleolithic Palestinians, enemies of the Jewish people have re-written two thousand years of history. No, they say, the Holy Land was never a barren wasteland. It had been from time immemorial the cherished, beloved country of the Palestinians, living at home in their ancestral domain.

No, the Zionist narrative, they say, is a complete fabrication. All those myths of halutzim/pioneers digging ditches and draining swamps, contracting malaria and dying from it; planting millions of trees, each sapling by hand; that never happened. Balestine has been a green and verdant land throughout its history tended by the tender-loving hands of the Ancient Palestinians.

Before the Holocaust, these enemies of the Jews say, there were no Jews in Balestine, no Zionists. After the War, a guilty Europe told the Jews, “Okay, go compensate yourselves for the Holocaust by just barging in and taking the land away from the Balestinians. Drive them from their homes, steal their orange groves,” and that is what the Zionists did as agents of Western imperialism.

This is why on the holy day of the Sabbath just yesterday in Samaria, not one but two homicidal Muslim maniacs stabbed two Jewish soldiers in separate places, hours apart, in surprise knife attacks. But there will be no international outcry.

The good news is that despite last Tuesday’s directive from Yaalon and Eisencott, the Defense Minister and Chief of Staff to IDF and other defense agencies to refrain from shooting dead those who throw Molotov cocktails at them, or, like twice yesterday, knife-in-hand attack as their forefathers have attacked for thousands of years. The directive was to cool it.

On Tuesday, that had been a depressing news item about the new rules for the use of deadly force in Yosh. One who, for example, attacks with a knife but then runs away is to be allowed to do that -- leastwise as I understood what I read.

Well, the good news from yesterday was not only that our soldiers were not grievously wounded and in one of those attacks, one of the wounded soldier’s mates did not lose a second in identifying the attack and unloaded his weapon into the attacker, killing this wild ass of a 16-year-old. His name was Ahmad Kamil Rafiq al-Taj. Bye, bye Ahmad.

The good news was the splendid military response on the scene and blessing from the high command in light of the directive of just a few days before. One report had it that the order went out because there was a feeling that too many Ishmaelites in recent days were being killed and there is concern that this could turn into an intifada.

Sort of like, if you've ever seen the classic John Wayne Western Red River in which a stampede occurs. The story has these cowboys driving 9,000 head of cattle a thousand miles to market, no easy thing to do, and the last thing you want is for the herd at some point to panic and stampede not in the direction you're driving them. A frightening experience. Cowboys got killed in them.

So the GSS is nervous about a stampede because too many Ishmael-clones are getting killed and that could light a fire no one wants to light, so extra restraint is to be applied.

Well, yesterday human nature took its course and was victorious. In the moment of threatening danger, the soldier deprived the would-be murderer of his life, thank G-d, regardless of the directive.

What needs to be done and never is is revamping Israel's public and instead of keeping alive the Oslo Two-State Solution, Israel should campaign for a Five-State Solution.

My book shows clearly that the classical Palestine map is today divided among four states, three of them officially Arab and Muslim and in sovereign control of 53% of the classical map. So, yes, Israel should campaign for the creation of a Palestinian on that 53%. It is not Jerusalem that must surrender territory to this allegedly ancient nation but Beirut, Damascus and Amman.

Israel has thus the right and obligation to support the creation of a Balestinian state there and do so wholeheartedly. Such a state should take the place of the three occupying Arab regimes. They are as much in occupation of Palestinian territory as Israel is, even more so. The gap is six percent between the two sides.

Instead, we suffer the abuse of world antiJewry and knife attacks for being basically seen as international criminals occupying land that does not belong to us but to the Palestinians.

Hence, the BDS movement, which took an interesting turn yesterday, you may have seen. The American Jewish from Long Island reggae musician Matisyahu was ordered by the organizers of a music festival outside of Valencia, Spain, where he was to appear later this month, to make a statement of his support for a Balestinian state. And when he refused, they canceled his performance. The local BDS outfit claims that he supports "an apartheid state which practices ethnic cleansing." Therefore, he cannot perform there.

I spent the better part of a summer in the early 1960s in Valencia so I am not too surprised. Spain like Ireland like Poland has a heavy-duty history of heavy-duty

Roman Catholicism and its inveterate Jew-hatred. In all likelihood, the local BDS people are not at all religious but fashionably hard left, anti-religious.

Nonetheless, their demand has the flavor and the passion of their Catholic forebears. How dare they interrogate this musician about his political views, which is what is being asked for here? This demand has the aroma of centuries of Inquisition in which Jews were interrogated over their religious beliefs.

This is a hallmark of a totalitarian mind at work. The late, great Jeanne Kirkpatrick got her job as U.S. UN ambassador by writing a splendid article on the differences between authoritarian and totalitarian dictatorships. The former were unfortunate for the people under them but no menace to the United States vs. totalitarian regimes like Nazism and Soviet Communism then still in force, and in this regard these post-Spanish Catholics are no less totalitarian in their demand that all people share their opinion of Israel, a very negative opinion at that.

Speaking before of totalitarians who are not content to control your physical lives but must rule your heart and mind too, last Thursday here, the latest outrage among the Enlightened in Israel was an interview on Galei Tsahal radio with Jewish Home Member of Knesset Betzalel Smotrich who said, “The media are controlled by gay people.” Now, that is from the Jerusalem Post on Friday -- I did not hear the interview myself -- and I would be curious to know what word in Hebrew he used.

Anyway, he said they controlled the media and “they are not healthy or normal.” He said “senior members of the media are homosexual and they hold the microphone and decide for all of us what we should think and what we should say.” He spoke of political correctness that denies him the opportunity to fully express his views. He spoke of being cut off from time to time.

I think it was his first public crack last week in which he drew attention to himself by calling the so-called Gay Pride Parade the Abomination Parade, using the Hebrew word from the Bible toeva. This of course outraged the Enlightened. Even his party leader Naftali Bennett chastised him. Bennett said there is no place for calling them that, even if it is his personal opinion.

Smotrich, though, said, “I did not make that word up It is written in the Torah.” That is true. It could not be clearer. The Torah uses the dismissive word toeva to describe sodomy.

Now. it is an interesting word that may be more stinging in English than Hebrew. The single word toeva, as my betters have taught me, could be analyzed into two parts, toeb-va, which in Hebrew means to “make a mistake, in something” that you do; you will go astray if you do it this way, is the intent.

In Hebrew, then, toeva is a like a warning sign on the highway about danger ahead; toeva is something you will go wrong in if you go that way.

In any case, MK Smotrich is absolutely right. The Bible clearly and simply opposes the behavior.

Bennett parried that in “The Bible it says Sabbath violators should die. Are we going to go and kill people who violate the Sabbath?”

I’m afraid Bennett’s thinking is faulty. He is comparing taking action with moral revulsion. To call “gay sex” an abomination is not prescriptive; it calls for no action. There is punishment here. And surely Bennet knows how incredibly rare did a Jewish court execute someone. They were always looking for loopholes. There is no comparison.

Smotrich deserves credit for, I think, lancing the boil of the political correctness surrounding sodomy in our time. And it’s about time. All over the Western world gay Stalinists are demanding that everyone agree that there is nothing wrong with what they do.

They have from day one of their Gay Liberation movement compared themselves to blacks as the objects of discrimination, when again there is no comparison. To be born black is a fact of nature that has no more bearing on a human being’s character than the color of another man’s hair or eyes, versus those addicted to perverse sexual behavior which is just that; behavior. How, after all do we judge a person if not via his behavior, not his god-ordained skin color or hair color?

That was Martin Luther King’s crowning achievement, I thought, as a preacher when he said at the Lincoln Memorial in 1963 that he wanted his children to be judged “by the content of their character and not the color of their skin.” Wonderful alliteration, splendid oratory and profoundly wise. That was the best of the Civil Rights movement in a few words.

Versus “homosexual.” The word was invented in the late 19th century in Germany during the enthusiastic youth of modern psychology and psychiatry and was meant to avoid the judgmental word “sodomite.” Abnormal psychological behavior became a subject of scientific study in that period.

But for the contemporary Gay Liberation movement, even homosexual has become unacceptable, politically incorrect. The accepted term is “gay.” It has been, I think, one of this movement’s greatest achievements, this displacement of the word homosexual by the original code word “gay” that such men used to disguise their addiction. And in getting polite society to jettison the words sodomite and homosexual, the essence of the behavior is therefore covered up.

Indeed, the whole gay marriage scam is another distraction for, as I understand it, the bulk of homosexual activity seems to be between strangers. Love has nothing to do with it. Indeed, speaking of love between people of the same sex is more camouflage for the behavior.

Today’s gay Stalinists are not interested in tolerance. In truth, they have always been tolerated so long as their behavior was done in private, not in the public square. There has never been a police action against two consenting adults in private doing whatever they want to do. What the gay Stalinists demand is not tolerance but approval. They want a blessing. And in the deal anyone who does not approve is guilty of a mental disorder and is a bigot.

And that is why I support Betzalel Smotrich bringing the issue to a new level of public debate, I hope.

It was Ralph Waldo Emerson the 19th century writer who said of Henry David Thoreau, his friend, fellow writer and neighbor, that he marches “to the beat of a different drummer,” this social isolate. And my own Jewish identity has never been in search of becoming normal like Shimon Peres or marching with the politically correct.

Rabbi Allen Schwartz of Congregation Ohav Tsedek in Manhattan once said that the reason the Jews have survived all these thousands of years is our fidelity to a rock-solid sexual code according to which sex is great, but within the bounds of holy matrimony.

All the rest is out of bounds.

And now back to our usual focus, the war against Israel conducted by the nations of the world that in our time are being led by none other than the President of the United States of America, an enemy agent of the Muslim Communist variety.

It seems that even some liberal post-Jews who voted for him are now uncomfortable with his recent jabs at Israel for opposing his Iran deal. They experience the aroma of antisemitism in these remarks. In the online magazine Tablet, surprisingly, for they are very liberal, the editors struck back. Obama’s insinuation that the same people who got the U.S. into the war in Iraq are at it again, with the implication, like Pat Buchanan the right-wing antisemite at the time, that it was the Israel lobby, when that is simply not true. Indeed, Obama’s own vice president Joe Biden and Secretary of State Kerry supported the war. The institutional Israel lobby said nothing.

We should not be overly surprised or upset, though, by Obama. This character, as I’ve suggested before, has no fidelity to truth, only what works in the moment.

California Congressman Kevin McCarthy was in Israel the other day, the Republican House Majority whip, and he was optimistic that not only would the Iran plan be defeated the first time, which is as expected, but Congress may even be able override the expected veto. G-d willing. It will be a day of jubilation if that happens, sort of like the Six-Day War or the rescue at Entebbe. Please, G-d, let that happen. Let the Muslim Communist agent in the Oval Office with his devilish plans for Israel be brought down.

Not that I expect the American Jewish community to be of much help. Another one of their stars, the Senator from Colorado Al Franken, pledged allegiance to the Anti-Jew’s Iran plot, like Barbara Boxer.

He is one of those entertainers whose career absolutely mystifies your truly. Franken became famous on “Saturday Night Live,” though whenever I saw him, I never laughed. This was a comedian? He was just another deJudaized comedian like Jon Stewart who knows nothing of Israel, of Islam, the Middle East, of Jewishness.

Tragically, Franken and Stewart represent millions of Americans of Jewish extraction and allegiance. I think I'll post on the DPP comments blog a letter of mine published in Friday's Jerusalem Post Magazine. It should be self-explanatory. Look for it on the August 11 comments page. It expresses my distress at how the American Jewish community is shrinking at warp speed, though I did not express my fears for the future of American support for Israel in light of this rapidly shrinking community.

The U.S. is becoming a different country, evidenced by the elections, these last two of this charlatan who obviously hates America. He said he was going to fundamentally change America obviously because he fundamentally does not like America, starting – and I mean starting -- with its support for Israel. That is how I interpreted his inaugural first telephone call as president to the antisemitic Muslim assassin Mahmoud Abbas and his first appointment of George Mitchell to press the Jews to retreat from the high ground.

And now, that is, on Friday, JTA, the Jewish Telegraph Agency, reported that the Reform Movement in America and HIAS (Hebrew Immigrant Aid Society) the veteran Jewish refugee assistance agency founded in 1881 after the pogroms in Russia which propelled ultimately two millions Jews to the States and ever more to other countries, have called on the Israeli government to re-examine its asylum policy for these African invaders, my word.

You all know, I imagine, how our insufferably enlightened High Court ordered the release of 1,200 of these men from their detention facility back into the streets of south Tel-Aviv, the veteran slum streets of south Tel-Aviv, to make life even more miserable for the poor Jews who live there.

The chutzpa of Rabbi Rick Jacobs of the Reform Movement and HIAS to arrogantly sermonize that Israel is not being as inclusive as it should be in dealing with these men.

This, I find, simply intolerable. The nerve of Rabbi Rick, who I am sure lives in a nice house in suburban Mamaroneck in Westchester County, to preach to Israel in the matter of these men with their record of misery-inducing behavior such as harassing women, rape, relieving themselves in the streets and other unsavory activities.

Apparently, Rabbi Rick is embarrassed that Israel is not as enlightened as it should be about taking in refugees.

Well, I've got news for Rabbi Rick and HIAS. This entire State of Israel is a refugee state. It is populated with mostly refugees and their offspring. Only a minority of Israelis arrived here from the free, democratic and prosperous West; from the States, Canada, England, Australia, France. Twenty years ago, a million refugees from the carcass of the old Soviet Union showed up; in the 1950s and 60s almost a million from the countries of Islam showed up; before that hundreds of thousands came from early 20th century Europe. Israel is an entire country meant to serve as an asylum for the Jewish people.

These Africans by international law should be taken in by the Egypt that crossed to invade Israel. Israel owes them nothing.

Rabbi Rick should read my letter on the August 11th DPP blog.
