Shalom laYehudim, Shalom laBnai Noach, Shalom laGoyim. It's the evening of the 6th day, gimmel beMar Heshvan, Parashas Noach, tav-shin-ayin-vav, the evening of the 5th day, Thursday, 15 October 2015, webcasting from the Holy Land once again splattered in Jewish blood.

Could there be two neighboring peoples on earth so unlike one another as Jews and Arabs, descended from half-brothers, Isaac and Ishmael, same father, different mothers?

One mother was of the line of Shem like her husband/cousin/uncle relative Avraham; the other was the granddaughter of Ham. The former gave birth to Jacob who later became Israel; the latter gave birth to Ishmael, expelled from his father's tents because he was such a wild ass of a person and even, in his wife Sarah's eyes (I think) a potential murderer of his own half-brother.

But the character of Ishmael goes even deeper into human history. He seems to carry the spiritual genes of Cain, the first murderer in history whose crime was fratricide: murdering one's brother.

Cain, remember, was shown mercy by HaShem, perhaps because he did not know it was wrong to kill another person. G-d protected him by putting a mark on his forehead to ward off potential revenge killers and he even let Cain bear offspring, indeed seven generations came from him, none of them, though, survived the great Flood – except for one woman.

Cain's seventh generation descendant, Lamech, had children with two separate women. Adah gave both to two boys Yaval and Yuval, and Tsila gave birth to a boy and a girl, Tuval-Cain and Naama.

Interestingly enough, this last male descendant of Cain bore Cain's name. All this is in the plain reading of Beraishees/Genesis, but according to the Sages and the traditional Midrash, his sister Naama married Noah. She was Mrs. Noah, who was the tenth generation from Adam and Eve and their third son, after the murder of Abel by Cain, Seth.

Noah's wife in the text is never named, but the Sages say it was Naama and she gave birth to Shem, Yafet and Ham who when introduced in the text gets a special introduction. The reader is told he was the father of Canaan, which makes sense because it was Moses who transcribed this story and told it to the Children of Israel in the Sinai Desert to teach them of the heritage of the people they were destined to invade and dispossess. The Canaanites, like the Egyptians they had slaved for, were also Hamites.

Ham, we also read, is singled out for his abuse/disrespect of their father and may even have, according to the Sages, homosexually raped him. The first time I read that interpretation I was puzzled, big time: where did that come from? But then I learned that the Sages in question were specifically the heads of the two great yeshivas in Babylon a.k.a. ancient Iraq, where a decade ago U.S. troops discovered the normalcy of homosexual rape in that culture.

Ham is singled out in the narrative, and as the great 19th century German Rabbi Shimshon Raphael Hirsch taught, his name, meaning "Hot," reflects his hotheaded, hot-blooded character. From him will come Ishmael, the wild-ass of a man.

Ham makes his entrance in the Book of Genesis and in the next verse comes the appearance for the first time of the word hamas, the unbridled aggression that characterized man before the Flood that brought on the Flood. And, as a believing Jew, I see no coincidence between that Hebrew word in its first context and the existence of an Ishmaelitic cult called Hamas.

And I say that Ham, more than his two brothers -- all three were born before the great Flood - was the one most infected with hamas, which survived the Flood through him. He brought it over into the history of man on the other side.

He also bore the spiritual genes of his mother's distant forefather Cain, the first murderer. Of his brother.

That's who these Arabs are in our time, I think. This week, you can watch them commit murder on the Internet, commonly using knives. The spiritual rabies that drives them to this behavior, the plunging of blades into Jewish flesh again and again, show this preference for knives. Indeed, in the first intifada ignited by Hamas, in rebellion against and as a rival to that of Fatah that liked putting bombs in planes to blow them out of the sky and planting them under the tomatoes in Jewish supermarkets, Hamas preferred what they themselves called "white weapons" meaning knives. In their universe, and they are not wrong, there is something more horrifying about murdering Jews this way than with guns and bombs. It's the hands-on pleasure of sinking a blade into a Jew or Jewess, even a 72-year-old woman as we saw yesterday at the Central Bus Station in Jerusalem; as happened in Pisgav Ze'ev where two Ishmaelite teenagers stabbed a Jewish teenager a dozen times.

They are the sons not only of Ishmael with his bow and arrow used to kill animals for food but also other men; they are the sons of Cain.

Only an antiJew dullard like John Kerry would think these flashing blades wielded by these Ishmaelites bent on not only homicide but suicide are, as he implied yesterday, frustrated by the “massive settlement activity.” That’s right, John. Ahmed is frustrated by “massive settlement activity” so he goes out to murder Jews and kill himself.

This is the same villain, Kerry, who ran to shake hands with the Communist Viet Cong before he smeared his fellow American soldiers with being war criminals. And as he betrayed his country back then, so he betrays America’s long-term ally and protégé, Israel, stabbing us in the back with the nasty moral equivalence of equating “both sides” and doing so under the banner of not passing judgment. Kerry had his spokesman this week equate the behavior of one errant Jew in Dimona and legions of suicide-murderers on the other side. That too, his spokesman, said was an act of terrorism in Dimona, and there you have it: both sides commit acts of terrorism. And never mind the different numbers involved.

Not that the government of Israel is much help. As usual, these materialists focus on technical measures in self-defense. They have ordered up punishment for the families of these knife-wielding Muslim maniacs, but dare not call them “Muslim maniacs.” On the Gatestone site today, their Bassam Tawil -- surely a pseudonym -- got it right when he dismissed Kerry’s nonsense about settlement activity as the motivation for this wave of horror killings. “This conflict is not about Islamic holy sites or Jerusalem. Murdering a Jewish couple in front of their four children has nothing to do with the Al-Aqsa Mosque or ‘occupation.’ For the terrorists, all Jews are ‘settlers’ and Israel is one big settlement. This is not an intifada -- it is just another killing-spree aimed at terrorizing the Jews and forcing them out of this part of the world. It already succeeded in the rest of the Middle East and is now being done there to the Christians as well. The current wave of terrorism is just another phase in our dream to wipe Israel off the face of the earth. The terrorists and their supporters are not struggling against a checkpoint or a wall. They want to see Israel destroyed, Jews slaughtered, and the streets of Israel running with Jewish blood.”

Right on. This is the correct image: “streets running with Jewish blood.” Think of that Arab demon in that Ramallah police station 15 years ago with eyes as crazed as those of “Renfield” in the classic 1931 version of Dracula after he was infected with the curse of the vampire.

How fortunate we are, then -- if that is the word -- to be able to see on the Internet actual acts of murder by the sons of Cain, Ham and Ishmael insane with their suicidal need to stab Jews to death, to see Jews spurt blood and be killed in the act.

A plague of madmen stalks the Land of Israel.

So the top story in Israel today – as of this evening, thank G-d, a quiet one no Jew slain by a Muslim maniac arguably no more in control of his bloodlust than a rabid dog – the top story during the day was this latest Big Lie out of the mouth of the Prince of Liars Mahmoud Abbas and his soulmate when it comes to lying about Jews, John Kerry.

You all you know my concise definition of antisemitism a.k.a. Jew-hatred: in every generation it is “lying about Jews,” and that was apparent out of the mouths of both Abbas and Kerry Tuesday and yesterday. One upside was that it united this country. Everybody was p.o.’d, left to right, with these guys.

On Tuesday, Kerry tongue-lashed Israel by saying it had to live up to the status quo on the Temple Mount post-1967 because, by implication, Israel was not doing that. Kerry, in other words, was taking the position of the Arabs in supporting that accusation.

He also refused to assign blame for the crisis to one side or the other. His spokesman Mark Toner at the State Department said his call against incitement was intended for both leaders. By implication, he was saying Netanyahu is inciting violence against the Arabs. Israel was doing something to provoke them -- just as they say.

And this is called -- leastwise I call it -- stabbing an ally in the back. Israel has been America’s ally, not the Church of the Latter-Day Balestinians. It is, in a way, linking arms with these murderous Balestinians literally stabbing Jews in the back. They do it for real with real blades; Kerry in the august halls of diplomacy does it with words.

Last night, a State Department spokesman spoke of reports of Israel using excessive force. He referenced the one, solitary Israeli attacking Bedouins at random in the desert town of Dimona, currently undergoing, this fellow, psychiatric examination, versus the dozens of Arab terrorists and their murderers in their outbursts as if once again the scales of justice here are perfectly balanced; perfect moral equivalence between Jews and Arabs in their exercise of violence. They are moral equals in their moments of violence.

On Tuesday, speaking at Harvard, Kerry spoke of “Palestinian frustration and the “massive building in the settlements” in relation to their demoniacal outbursts of bloodlust and homicide.

This is, of course, the age-old belief that the Jews themselves bring on anti-Semitism themselves. Poor, poor, idealistic, post-pubescent Ancient Palestinian patriots are “frustrated,” he thinks, by the stalled peace process and this is why they are committing suicide by murdering Jews. These are the implications of John Kerry’s view of things here.

These are people – John Kerry, Abbas --- with problems when it comes to good and evil. In Kerry’s mind in the 1960s, the bad guys in Viet Nam were his fellow Marines and the good guys the Communist Viet Cong whose rights and desires, he believed, had to be respected.

And here he is a Biblical generation later in league with his own president Obama who has radically removed U.S. military strength from the Middle East and stands mute basically as America-hating, Islamist Iran rises to dominance and old Russia enters to plant its flag and bring in its troops.

Today, all week, Kerry and Obama and the MSM in Europe have been uniform in misreporting the situation here, turning it inside out. Muslim maniacs with knives are stabbing Jews at random in the streets; the Jews kill the Muslim maniacs, and the MSM ledes with the killers' deaths and insinuates Israeli crimes in killing them. The top story today was Abbas claiming that Israel is conducting "field executions," like that boy in Pisgat Ze'ev. Abbas claimed he was executed in the street. In truth, he was felled by a passing car, he did not die and is in a Jewish hospital.

Mahmoud Abbas wrote a doctoral dissertation on the lie of the Holocaust and how the Jews collaborated with the Nazis in that period in killing the Jews who were killed.

Abbas also adopted Arafat's tactic in July 2000 and that is to deny the Jews ever had Temples on Haram a-Sharif. And now he lies about our police and IDF and Border Guards carrying out "field executions" of innocent Balestinians.

Let's think about that accusation for a moment, for he was more or less accusing Israelis of pouncing on innocent Palestinians at random and killing them.

Which is a very good description -- exactly really -- of what his boys are doing to us: pouncing on innocent Jews at random and killing them. His accusation is a classic, textbook specimen of psychological projection. His accusation, that the Jews are murdering Balestinians at random, was the top story here and how people responded to it.

This is the mind of an uncivilized barbarian who cannot face, cannot confront and handle guilt. I am reminded of the eruption of the IRS scandal a couple of years ago when FOX TV's Bill O'Reilly interviewed the Muslim-Communist in the Oval Office, confronted him with the allegations of massive corruption at the IRS, to which Obama responded by brushing it off as politics. He said there was not a smidgen of corruption. Another president raised in a Judeo-Christian culture would respond with regret at the possibility of corruption and promise to investigate and root out the corruption.

Instead, Obama just smirked and said, "not a smidgen of corruption." Denial.

This is Arab-Muslim behavior. It is a way life of lying and denying, a way of pushing off failure and sin. Shame they know big time, but not guilt.

This too goes back to Ham whose sin was the exposure of his father's nakedness, the first nakedness in the Book after the Garden of Eden. Without nakedness, there is no shame.

The Arabs live in a society of veils for women, and wrap-around sunglasses for the sheiks in their robes and their completely covered heads. It is excessive covering up in public.

Some good news in Israel today -- to the extent politically possible: some politicians lashed out at Kerry for basically siding with our murderers, Gilad Erdan and Bogie Yaalon. Erdan used the word “idiotic” to describe Kerry’s remarks. Yaalon spoke the word “nonsense.” And within minutes the prime minister told all his ministers to cool it with the remarks which was the prudent thing to do. Don’t lie, but no good can come from blurting out the truth that we are dealing with antiJews and stupid ones to boot. Kerry really seems to think that the Muslims here shrieking “Allahu Akbar!” like that mass murdering Muslim army doctor at Ft. Hood are frustrated Balestinian patriots driven to mass murder-suicide by the building of more homes for Jews inside of pre-Oslo existing communities.

Oslo never called for throttling life inside the especially large communities like Efrat, Ariel, Bet El. Jews have babies; the babies grow up, get married and have more babies and this growing population needs more homes. The existing communities did not need to push out the boundaries of their settlements. They would build more homes inside the existing lines. That was Oslo -- not that this back-stabber Kerry knows that.

Not that it would make a difference. This dimwit cannot see the religious fanaticism of these homicidal and suicidal maniacs whose source has nothing to do with more apartments in Judea and Samaria. It has to do with the existence of the entirety of Israel. And if you want to talk about frustration, it is the frustration of Arabs who can’t get their hands on our wealth.

These men are also, I think, possibly, the victims of being terribly beat-up, psychosexually speaking. Hence the fantasy of violently raping virgins for all eternity. I would not be surprised if many of these homicidal-suicide maniacs had been homosexually raped as boys – just like the Sages may have thought in 6th century Iraq when they were witness to this behavior among the Arabs among whom they lived.

* * (Musical Interlude) * *

Yes, the two top stories here today were really one and the same: the lies of Kerry and Abbas and how the global MSM is reporting these satanic knifings in the streets of Jews by insane, homicidal maniacs.

In Berlin, JPost’s Benjamin Weinthal reported on how the Israeli Embassy fired back at the media there for their demented portrayal of events here. The Rheinische Post described the killings of the Arab attackers as “Jewish acts of revenge.” I imagine you all saw the video of that Arab monster driving his car into that bus stop in Geula, sending a man flying through the air like a ragdoll, and then a nearby security guard runs over and shoots him as he is hacking a rabbi to death. This is an act of revenge?

German public radio did a piece as well called “Pictures that fuel a revolt” with a narration claiming “Israel’s society brutalizes, because it is shaped from its own military and occupation army, whose soldiers with increasing brutality act against stone-throwers.”

And it does not help that Arab primitives in Western suits and ties with PhDs like Saeb Erekat call for an international probe of Israel’s killing. “The Israeli government is fully responsible for the growing cycle of violence, extremism and bloodshed. The Israeli pattern of dealing with Palestinians now is based on field executions and unfair trials. We are a defenseless people living under occupation. Israel is killing civilians and children and practicing collective punishment.”

Again projection. The most massive thing here in Israel today is the countrywide fear among Jews out in public, their heads constantly swiveling, fearing an attack. Terrorism spreads panic far beyond the site of an attack. A bomb explodes in a bus, say, in Beer-Sheva, G-d forbid, and the next day the buses in Haifa are half-empty, there and all around the country. Terrorism is the ultimate in collective punishment. Terrorism judges every Jew a worthy target for murder.

And what continues to amaze yours truly is the foolishness of Israelis across the board continuing to hope for, to work for, to wave the flag of a peaceful solution, amicably signed by both peoples.

Israel will become an even better country when it stops agreeing to talk with Erekat and Abbas, the whole lot of them, because they are simply pathetic primitives for whom truth has no meaning, guilt is a stranger, with bloodlust and cruelty periodically erupting in orgies of murder.

* * (Musical Interlude) * *

PMW reports this week that that Arab assassin in the Old City who murdered those two Jewish men, both married, both rabbis, I think (no matter), one Muhammad Halabi who was killed there after his multiple stabbings of Jews, was awarded posthumously an honorary law degree from the Balestinian Bar Association.

Yes, an out-of-control, uncivilized enemy of civil society murders and is given an honorary law degree for that.

And I say there is nothing in Lewis Carroll’s Wonderland any wackier than this reality we Jews in Israel have to deal with from our goy neighbors.

When oh when will it become clear to Israelis that no good – no good -- can come from talking to such people as Erekat and Abbas? Toward what end? An amicable, mutually agreed peace treaty and an amicable division of Judea and Samaria and the rise of a peaceful, cooperative, neighboring, Balestinian state?

The original sin of Oslo was shaking hands with these intellectual and ethical Neanderthals with their antediluvian morality.

Israel will become stronger and better when we officially cancel Oslo and assert our full sovereignty over Judea and Samaria – if not yet the Temple Mount.

So thank G-d for this relative day of quiet. The IDF had to deal again with another mob of howling Arabs in the Gaza containment zone who carried on at the Jurassic Park-like barrier.

Oh well. Another day, another Ishmaelitic Hamitic mob scene.
