Shalom laYehudim, Shalom laBnai Noach, Shalom laGoyim. It is the evening of the 4th day, vav beKhodesh Kislev, Parashas Vayetsei, tav-shin-ayin-vav, the evening of the 3rd day, Tuesday, 17 November 2015, webcasting from Herzl's Judenstaat, meaning not The Jewish State but the State of Jews.

And judging by Herzl's book Old-New Land, he did not envision a particularly Jewish state but a normal state for people of Jewish extraction, which makes sense because his brand of Zionism was the result of the failure of the Reform Judaism he was raised in. The first Reform Temple was built in 1811; Herzl was born a generation later in 1960, in the second generation of Reform, meaning he was one of the first Reform Jewish babies; the way Moshe Dayan was the first kibbutz baby.

Herzl grew up in a culture in which he was legally an equal citizen in Budapest than Vienna but suffered hostility as a Jew all his life. And because he finally understood that even though he did not live a classical Jewish life and did not wear clothing identifying him as a Jew, he was still hated and blocked in his career.

Ergo, he realized the Jews had to leave Europe because of antisemitism, which was the latest trend in Jew-hatred, a new idea. He thought they could create a state for themselves and duplicate the gentile lifestyle they were accustomed to. Herzl's dream for Jerusalem was not the building of the third and final Temple but the building of an opera house to rival the best in Europe in Vienna, Rome, Milan or Paris, where he could go to see the Wagnerian operas that he loved so much -- and glorified pre-Christian, German pagan culture -- as often as he wanted to.

He never imagined the kind of news stories that fill the MSM here daily. His futuristic novel imagined the Judenstaat 20 years after its peaceful founding, but here we are after 67 years of statehood and we find out that yesterday morning, Israeli soldiers in a surprise raid entered an Arab house to dispossess those who lived in it and blow it up.

They did, but a mob of Arabs threw rocks at them and firebombs and little bombs and before it was over the soldiers had to shoot dead three Arabs, to which we respond in Herzlandia with a yawn and a ho-hum because in truth Israeli soldiers every night of the year raid into Arab areas to arrest the homicidal among them.

And of course to remove all the weapons and ammunition that they accumulate illegally and whatever else the enemy may have. It is a part of Israel's daily routine.

The diplomacy and security cabinet here in Jeruaslem ruled in secret that the so-called Northern Wing of the Islamic movement among Arabs with citizenship is an illegal organization. This too occasioned surprise raids yesterday in many locations around the country to confiscate computers, equipment, weapons, put a freeze on bank accounts.

Last month, the head of this group Sheikh Ra'ed Salah was handed another prison term, this one for 11 months. He has been the mastermind of stirring up trouble on the Temple Mount, the guy who sent the wailing women, the Murabitat ladies, to stand next to Jews peacefully present on the Mount and shriek into their faces.

Also in the routine news here over the last 48 hours: yesterday, it was reported that the GSS and IDF captured last Friday's murderer because his father informed on him. Another son told the father and the father reported to the IDF because he feared his house would be demolished.

Today, though, he was in full denial and was a big supporter for his "heroic" son. Who knows the truth?

But it points to a truth about our reality here that I took up last webcast in the matter of this same incident in which a Red Crescent ambulance came upon the scene after the murder and fled. I chose to put myself in the shoes of that Arab crew and give them the benefit of the doubt. And here we are with a similar situation. Herzl's Israelis harbor the fantasy that someday the Arabs here will smile upon us, but even if a decisive majority wanted to do that, a significant minority among them would not let them. Raise the possibility of peace with Israel, and there is no shortage of neighbors ready to kill you.

How different the Arabs are. In the West, one of its symbols is the Statue of Liberty in New York harbor, gift of the French people to the American people, both holding high the value that each individual's right to freedom must be maximized (within the unavoidable constraints of accommodating other people in society.)

Versus the Muslims whose religion is called Submission – the opposite of liberty -- whose society cannot tolerate differences of opinion. The Jewish people do not lack for Leftists who take the side of the enemy, make his case for him and accuse their own side as responsible for the terrible situation. In Israel, there is no lack of those who wave the banner of the Balestinians. They are Balestinian Patriots of Jewish extraction, versus the Arabs, the ocean of Arabs that surrounds us on three sides, 300 million-plus people, where an individual who speaks up for Israel in public risks being killed on the spot. Try to hold a political demonstration in Cairo's Tahrir Square protesting anti-Israel activities by the Egyptian government and the speaker might not last two minutes before being shot dead by an outraged Muslim who knows no court would send him to prison.

We live in a country of Jews in its 7th decade that can access by the Internet sermons by Muslim clerics in their mosques, like one about three weeks ago broadcast on HAMAS TV who said, "Hitler did not do anything. There is not a single shred of evidence proving that the Holocaust really took place. Today's Zionists are the Nazis. By Allah, they are more Nazi than Hitler. They are more criminal and racist than anyone else on Earth. Even according to their own book and false beliefs, they are more Nazi than Hitler. Hitler was a criminal killer, but if we compare him to them, that they are the Nazis and the criminals. They have been lying about the Holocaust all along."

Herzl did not have an inkling about the nature and quality of the Arabs who would surround his hoped-for state of Jews.

That was a Hamas-type religious leader speaking, and as for the allegedly moderate Fatah rivals of Hamas these days, its official Facebook page yesterday posted political cartoons showing Netanyahu helping the ISIS demons in Paris on Friday to aim their guns, namely, Israel was behind the last Friday's eruption of Muslim hell on earth. All this according to the "moderate" Fatah reported by Palestinian Media Watch.

In addition, the official, "moderate" PA newspaper ran an op-ed that likewise "exposed" the Mossad as the true mastermind of the massacres in Paris last Friday

Herzl never realized how Jew-hatred is classically a kind of mental illness that his acquaintance in Vienna Dr. Freud might have understood. It is a kind of hallucinatory dream-state in which Jews are imagined to be the most evil people on earth, and especially when the evil at hand comes from within oneself or one's people.

Notice the immense power of denial at work here A Hamas preacher sees Jews as not the victims of Nazis but worse than the Nazis. And the Fatah group sees the horror in Paris committed by fellows just like themselves, Muslim Arabs in the name of their religion; they see the horror among the civilized and they cannot cope with this. In psychological self-defense, they must pass the buck. They accuse the Jews of their own guilt. The Mossad was responsible.

This is the dynamic at work as in the invention of the "Palestinians." The Arabs have been unable for Islamic reasons to respect the right of Jews to live free of their kind of dictatorial society, and what they do is invent a fantasy in which it is the Jews who won't let the "authentically ancient" owners of Palestine have their freedom from Jewish oppression.

According to Arutz 7 on Sunday evening, on his Facebook page veteran Israeli journalist Eldad Beck reported from Paris that the French media were covering the wave of support for France around the globe but conspicuously absent was any mention of Israeli support, in particular the impromptu rally the night after the horror in Tel-Aviv's Rabin Square by some five thousand Israelis (some say ten thousands) who came to hear speeches by the French Ambassador and Deputy Prime Minister Sylvan Shalom, Boojie Herzog, and President Emeritus and Oslo Criminal Uncle Shimon.

The Tel-Aviv Municipal building was lit up in the colors of the French flag, and I found the whole business saddening for the ignorance and/or naiveté and post-Jewish provincialism of those in attendance. Eldad Beck's report concerned Europe's view, which was also on display I say during the Charlie Hebdo business when Bibi had to fight for a place in the front line. For the French, there is cosmos of difference between the terror the night before in Paris and the killing of Jews here. The French make no connection. There is no solidarity with Israel. The rally in Tel-Aviv was a like suitor spurned by the object of his affection. France was unmoved by this demonstration and the fine words of the speakers.

It didn't used to be that way. In the 1950s, thanks in large part to the Hell on earth the Muslims in Algeria in their rebellion were making for France, Frenchmen saw in Israel a fellow victim of Arab cruelty.

Indeed, in that decade the United States was not yet Israel's protector. France was. France had installed the telephone system. Israeli passports were printed in Hebrew and French, not English. And above all, France was the great weapons supplier. The Six-Day War was fought with French weaponry.

In 1956, the Sinai Campaign was even a joint Israeli-French-British operation.

But after France ran out of Algeria in 1962, and Israel plastered the Arabs in 1967, Charles De Gaulle did a perfect about-face betrayal of Israel, stabbed Israel in the back, insulted Israel, and things have never been the same.

Like other European countries in the 1970s, France was hit by PLO terror and its answer was kowtowing to the terrorists. The French were the first in Europe to meet with Arafat and led the way in Europe toward recognizing the PLO as a legitimate political organization instead of a syndicate of international terrorist criminal murderers.

Even today, France has been threatening for months now a UN Security Council resolution basically ordering a half-million Jews to get out of their homes and hand everything over to the Muslims.

That is why I found the solidarity rally last Saturday night embarrassing and even pathetic. Those in attendance apparently imagined that since the horror of the night before in Paris, the French would reach out to Israel in solidarity as fellow victims of Arab-Muslim terror.

Well, Eldad Beck's Facebook post contained the message to fellow Israelis, more or less, "You can forget out that." Nobody in France makes any connection. Terror in Paris and terror in Israel are two separate phenomena, the former clearly an evil horror, the later understandable because "Les juives ont vole la patrie des Anciens Palestiniens," the Jews stole Palestine from the Ancient Palestinians.

Which brings yours truly back to my chronic kvetch about an official Israel that has never ever gone to war against enemy propaganda: the "Palestinian" Narrative of things. Worse, Israel has assimilated some of the enemy's basic lies and made them their own. In this Benjamin ben Bentzion was classically Israeli in his infamous Bar Ilan speech in which he saluted the right of the "Palestinians" to a state in Judea and Samaria which did double duty as an attack on the religion of the Jewish people -- in which the gift of the Promised Land is central -- and no less on the secular Zionist movement which also posited the right of the Jewish people to restore the barren wastes of Eretz Yisrael and live in them as a free people. Bibi simultaneously trashed the Torah and Herzl in one blow.

And to this day official Israel remains perfectly silent as the enemy daily spews this hallucinatory poison that has become common knowledge around the globe. It was Manfred Gerstenfeld whose research suggests that, like 40% of European youth think we Israelis are acting toward the Arabs the way the Nazis toward us. We are committing genocide.

Charges like these are made daily, but I never hear Israel's leaders taking on this craziness, perhaps because they think it is apparent to all people that it is craziness, when that is an assumption that needs revisiting and investigating. That was Gerstenfeld's research.

Indeed, a story over the last week out of Britain is that three-quarters of British Jews believe that the so-called settlements are the major obstacle to peace, and I say that this is just another story of assimilation and the death of Diaspora communities that tracks very nicely with American surveys according to which roughly three-quarters of American Jews getting married are not marrying other Jews and the same roughly three-quarters of them voted for Obama, twice.

And if this community in both countries thinks and behaves this way, what are the goyim to think? London Times Columnist Melanie Phillips has written that in the MSM in England, terror in Israel is barely if ever reported on. The only "terror" stories filed concern the Arabs as targets of Jews. It is as if there is only one side to the violence here.

When oh when is official Israel going to wake up and counter-attack the cavalcade of Arab delusions of Jewish perfidy, of Arab craziness? The enemy must be exposed for the nutjobs that they are, their leaders in particular, like Abbas's recent lie about "dirty Israeli feet" in al-Aqsa Mosque.

And while the new Israeli is at it, he might demolish the very idea of "Palestinians" with rights to land rightfully the sole possession of the Jewish people.

Well, if this webcast's first two segments focused, as they should, on the day in Israel, even here local events took a back seat to the nice coincidence of the horror in Paris and the G20 meeting in Antalya, Turkey, where Emir Barack Hussein re-enacted his coldness on display last January when in the same City of Lights the Charlie Hebdo offices were turned into an abattoir and, in his words, "some folks" were killed a little grocery store, only now the MSM seems to have opened their eyes to this man as never before.

For sure, his performance yesterday over 45 minutes of questions from journalists left even American MSM journalists stunned. He defended his strategy, so called, of leading from behind as the police in France and Belgium were frantically searching for the 8th massacre criminal and in one Brussels suburb in particular, Molenbeek, which was exposed as a place with 22 mosques, a hotbed of holy war warriors where last Friday night's mastermind and three others came from.

Obama's jaw-dropping performance prompted Senator Ted Cruz to speak the truth that non-idolaters have known about this man: "He is not interested in defending America."

This villain Obama yesterday in Turkey held fast to his desire to import another 10,000 Arabs from Syria, in addition to the 2,000 reported already there. He said it would be a betrayal of American values to deny entry to these victims of terrorism in Syria – as if he cares and knows what American values are.

And this number is, by one source, in addition to the hundreds of thousands of Muslims he has already brought into the country since he entered office.

This is what he meant in his first campaign for the presidency when he said he wanted to fundamentally change the country and, in retrospect, in view of his years in office, his primary, fundamental change was making America hospitable to Islam, where he fantasized it displacing Judaism as the second most important religion in the country.

So what was on display yesterday was a variation on his reaction after the Ft. Hood massacre; his reaction as well last January when he brought up the behavior of Crusaders after Islamic head-chopping was dominating the news.

This man is a press agent, a missionary for Islam and that means never criticizing it. Islam is never to be spoken of in the same sentence as terror or terrorism. This is his guiding principle.

It is no secret he has no name for this enemy other than "extremists." They are unnamed, unlabeled. His words last January about "some folks" gunned down in a grocery store was another one of his acts of antisemitism. There was no excuse for what he did, plus his refusal to join the great march.

This man is an antisemite in a league with the foreign ministress of Sweden who yesterday linked the horror in Paris to the frustrations of the Ancient Ones, which I find to be classic antiJew behavior. In her universe, the Jews are the evil ones and the Muslims their victims. But in Paris the Muslims were obviously, and hardly for the first the time, the guilt-bearers, which truth she cannot bear. The Jews are objects of vilification in her universe, not the Muslims, and so when the Muslims are so obviously guilty, she must transfer the guilt to the Jews.

The Paris massacre makes such an antiJew unbalanced and uncomfortable. The stability of their inner life is deranged. The Jews are the bad guys, not the Muslims, not the Arabs. And when reality reverses that polarity, antiJews like her lose their equilibrium.

Israel called in the Swedish ambassador to complain about her behavior. The Swede, like Arabs, denied the plain truth of her remarks. He said she made no link when of course she did.
