Shalom laYehudim, Shalom laBnai Noach, Shalom laGoyim. It is the evening of the 6th day, beShvat, Parashas Bo, tav-shin-ayin-vav, the evening of the 5th day, Thursday, 14 January 2016, webcasting from the Land of Israel, home of the Children of Israel, in their timeless battle to stay alive and remain Jewish.

So the top story, I think, domestically in Israel this week was the revelation in Yediot yesterday of another video showing another Israeli like Ezra Nawi -- who relishes sending Arabs to be tortured and put to death by the PLO -- another Israeli who has crossed the line and joined the enemy.

This guy Nawi, it turns out, has a criminal record, some kind of degenerate crime, and the other Israeli is Alon Liel, only by contrast he was a successful career diplomat for Israel. He was the ambassador to South Africa and the ambassador to Turkey and director-general of the Foreign Ministry. His wife is also a major activist in the so-called peace camp that identifies with the Arab enemy.

In this video, Liel is shown talking to a Breaking the Silence group and advising them that the battle for driving the Jews out of Judea and Samaria is lost inside the country -- no support for that -- but not outside of it. In fact, that is where the battle should be fought, he said, inside the UN where the "peace camp" can help the UN treat Israel as if it were Apartheid South Africa.

He was there in South Africa when the world put sanctions on the white regime. He mentions how South Africa's sports teams were denied games all around the world and how the passport was no longer recognized, and how the loss of sports especially affected South Africans terribly. I heard that myself from a friend, an Israeli now but originally a South African Jew, who said something quite similar. Not being able to play internationally broke the spirit of the South African whites. Liel was suggesting getting FIFA, the international soccer association, to deny Israel games abroad. He was calling for a boycott of Israeli sports.

Alon Liel, you see, is absolutely convinced that the only way Israel can survive is by evacuating Judea and Samaria, by returning to the 1949 cease-fire lines.

He alludes in this video clip to the “guys” he has worked with without naming them but the implication is evidently to Yuval Diskin and Yaakov Peri, both former heads of the GSS and known “doves.”

Of course, Liel professed his love for Israel and because he fears for its survival he just knows Israel has to retreat and if need be, peace activists like BTS should go to the UN Security Council to get sanctions like those that destroyed Apartheid South Africa. He wants similar sanctions slapped on Israel as the only way to rescue Israel.

He even relates his efforts in this regard, the advice he gave to Mahmoud Abbas in 2014, that he call three Security Council member countries, and cry if he had to, to get them to impose sanctions on Israel and recognize a Balestinian state in Judea and Samaria that would make of Israel a criminal, occupying state and as such would have to be expelled from the United Nations like South Africa was. This is what Liel wants for Israel.

Quite a scenario in the mind of this former diplomat, who now looks upon Israel as many foreign ministers do. He was director-general of the Foreign Ministry here. The bad guy according to the international consensus is Israel oppressing the poor, poor Balestinians and he feels the same way.

Also apparent in his talk was the absence of even one word concerning the more than half-million Jews who today live over the 1949 cease-fire line. In his head, there is an almost Muslim-like, child-like wish for the impossible: a running of the clock of history backwards to a time when there was no Jewish presence in Judea and Samaria; and then there would be peace.

And I emphasize the use of the word “wish” here which is most important because it refers to something impossible. For example, “I wish I were in California right now...” which is impossible. There is no rocket that can be built next to be now and rocket me to California so I could be there now! It is impossible for me to shoot over to California now. Thus, I am wishing for the impossible. It is healthy to want something in the future that is attainable but to wish for the impossible is to engage in wishful thinking.

That is Alon Liel and Leftists like him: he wishes for a return to an earlier time as the road to peace, and never mind that even in 1949 there was no peace either.

But worst of all, most shocking in the mind of Leftist Jews like this, was the absence of even one word about the hundreds of thousands who would be affected by the transfer of rule in Judea and Samaria from Israel to the Arabs. They appear nowhere in his dream of peace.

What would happen to them in his scenario? Would we Jews remain in place and become citizens of the New Philistia and learn how to sing the Balestinian national anthem and become a minority in the Balestinian state?

The Arabs, though, say all of us must leave. It is ironic, to say the least, how antiJews like Jimmy Carter, Martin Indyk, John Kerry all threaten Israel with branding on Jewish foreheads the word "Apartheid" if they don't give the Arabians what they want, oblivious in this state of mind to the truth that what the Arabs want is a Judenrein state. We are the ones guilty of apartheid because we don't help them create an apartheid state for Ancient Palestinians.

We get smeared for not helping them to create their Jew-free state. We are the racists vs. their wish that goes unrecognized as a Nazi-like dream.

It is really quite something to watch this video clip of Alon Liel advising Breaking the Silence group to go the route of world-antiJewry and its dreams: using the Security Council to recognize a Balestinian state that would automatically turn Israel in a criminal state and get kicked out of the UN -- at least until it hands Judea and Samaria back to the Arabs.

In this man, there is zero empathy for the hundreds of thousands of Jews who either would accept submission to the PLO/HAMAS government or become refugees in their own country. Liel wants to see Israel once again 9-15 miles across.

This is a man who radiates sometimes naiveté and sometimes malice. He seems to be a mixture of a fool and a villain. In any case, what stands out is his identification with the enemy. Their agenda is his agenda, but even then he stops short of the real consequences were his wish to be fulfilled. What would happen to his fellow Jews? Leftist Jews like him, the Peace Now types, blithely answer, "Oh, they will move back inside the Green Line and we will welcome them with open arms."

Right. And where will they live? Where will their new homes and neighborhoods, schools and shopping centers, medical clinics, be built to house this half-million-plus refugee population? And who will pay for it all? And in many cases, the refugees will lose their livelihoods and have no income.

None of these considerations is ever heard coming from the mouths of Leftists like Alon Liel. They are fools for wishing for the impossible; the return to the 1949 line and villains for their callous disregard of how their wish if fulfilled would destroy the lives of hundreds of thousands of fellow Jews.

It really is, I think, at bottom, the perennial, eternal rebellion by some Jews against being Jewish at all. They hate identifying with this people and wind up identifying with this people's worst enemies, the murderers among the Muslims here and their antisemitic financial backers in Europe and at the UN.

Alon Liel and fellow Leftists seem to suffer from some kind of hysteria that they cope with by identifying with their worst enemies as they display utter indifference to the rights of Jews to live where we do.

As world antiJewry paints our faces with the filthy word “apartheid,” they cheer on the Balestinians in their quest for a Judenrein Philistia. They wave high the banner of international ethics that wants to see Judea and Samaria the last place on earth that Jews are forbidden to live.

Well, the lede story in JPost this morning was the miserable relationship between Israel and Sweden thanks to that delusional, functionally medieval Viking of a woman, Foreign Ministress Margaret Wallstrom. She really is suffering from classic antiJewitis, an inflammation of if not the brain then the mind that has the victim hallucinating Jews doing evil things, in this case, murdering Ancient Palestinians for no reason.

One imagines she imagines we do it for revenge. As the Muslims here attempt to murder us at random, when they do we strike back and murder them at random. Our soldiers in uniform have the freedom to do that, in her infected mind.

So the Swedish ambassador was called into the Foreign Ministry for a dressing down, and the Prime Minister has declared Sweden will have no role in the peace process. High-ranking Swedish functionaries will not be received in the country, and so on and so forth.

As Minister of Energy Yuval Steinitz said of her, “A person who looks at the war on terror worldwide and comes to the conclusion that Israel is the only country whose tactics must be investigated, is antisemitic.”

Bless you, Yuval, one of the few secular Israelis capable of saying that. Steinitz went on to say, in a radio interview, “The government of Sweden has become completely anti-Israel and unfortunately, also a supporter of terrorism.”

This was a view, by the way, that was uniform across the political spectrum. There was rare unity in Israel today. Avigdor Lieberman said, “The only thing the foreign minister of Sweden hasn’t done is physically join the Palestinian terrorists and stab Jews.”

Even Tsipi Livni got into the act. She said, “We won’t accept any comparison between our forces fighting against terror and terrorists. Israel has a moral army and a strong judicial system. We will accept no meddling in our internal affairs by Sweden or any other country.”

It is a pity, though, that Livni recoils at comparing Jewish ethics in the use of violence with those of the Arabs, but when it comes to the right to this country, she sees moral equivalence. The right of the Balestinians to a state here is equal to the Jewish right in her mind, and never mind that like Alon Liel she does not think past that belief or wish.

She wishes this were true, but it simply cannot be that two nations have identical rights to the hills of Judea and Samaria. That is no more possible than trying to pour two gallons of gasoline into a one-gallon jerry can. It can't be done. Livni the Leftist also engages in wishful thinking, meaning, wishing for the impossible. She wants a Jewish state here and a Palestinian state here too.

Fuggedaboutit. To be a Zionist, as she stills claims to be, means asserting Jewish rights to this Land above all other claims. It means denying the right to this Land to all other nations on the planet, starting with the Arabs who today call themselves Balestinians.

Ours is the only true claim and theirs is bogus. But Leftist Jews wish to have their cake and eat it too. Like middlebrow Alan Dershowitz who claims to be both pro-Israeli and pro-Palestinian.

This is intellectual claptrap. One can no more be that than a Communist and a Capitalist at the same time, a Jew and Christian at the time, a Jew and Muslim at the same time. One is one or the other.

Well, I saw maybe a minute of the State of the Union address by the President of the United States. That's really about all I can take before becoming queasy watching this unctuous, shallow, dissembling, narcissistic Muslim with his dramatic pauses that he inserts as if to allow his worshipful audience to digest the depth of his mind and wisdom.

I did, though, speed-read the transcript of it, looking for intelligence and finding none. What a performance. The White House transcript available on line adds the moments of applause that he got after one vacuous bromide after another. This was no State of the Union address but a political campaign speech advertising himself and his good intentions, and those of his audience applauding this pabulum.

But what really made me angry and sad was less his performance that I am used to than the reception he got when he entered the chamber. The number of hands shooting out to shake his as the conquering hero, and among them conspicuous was Jewish Congressman from New York Eliot Engel. To his credit, he broke ranks with the party and voted against the Iran abomination deal, but last night he too looked like a groupie at a rock concert ecstatic to touch his idol. Does Eliot Engel not know this man is antisemite, an enemy of the Jewish people big time?

He also he received a warm welcome from new House Speaker Paul Ryan. Why? Obama has proven himself again and again an enemy of the United States and I think one secret of his success is that he executes his villainy in plain sight. This charlatan, this con man, has been itching to hand over 150 billion dollars to the internationally recognized champion of terror states, and even as he was receiving all these smiles and handshakes and applause, he was silent on Iran at the very moment Iran was humiliating U.S. Navy sailors whose plight he said nothing of.

This wicked man has also conducted this villainy without receiving in return freedom for the existing American hostages in Iran apart from the sailors. And still he got the reception he got.

Iran has been the Number 1 enemy of the U.S. and Western civilization since 1979 and his policy has always been to make nice to Iran. The West may judge Iran harshly but not Obama.

He entered office in January 2009. Five months later in June, in Iran there was an election. The ruling junta was beaten but then stole the election and killed people to remain in power. Dissidents looked to the U.S. for support and Obama looked away.

Last spring in the Geneva negotiations with Iran, the U.S. led by Kerry and Wendy Sherman were reported to be working as lawyers for the Iranians against the others.

Leftists like Obama, like Alon Liel, identify with the enemy and take the enemy's side. They are traitors to their people.

Obama also in this last State of the Union speech -- which was not about the state of the union at all but his own agenda -- said, "When politicians insult Muslims (a presumptive dig at Donald Trump) whether abroad of our fellow citizens, when a mosque is vandalized, or a kid is called names. That doesn't make us safer. That's not telling it like it is. It is just wrong. (Applause).

This calls to mind his first inaugural speech when he declared America was a country of "Christians and Muslims..." not a Judeo-Christian country any more, thereby pushing the Jews out of the way and taking their place as the second most important religion in America. Here his focus was on mosques being vandalized and Muslim children being called names.

Puh-leeze. The statistics on hate crimes of this nature are clear: the Jews suffer three to four times more hate crimes than Muslims do.

His speech was pabulum, characteristic of Muslim culture for also confusing the wish and the deed.

He spoke of his last year in office, when he "will keep pushing for progress on work that I believe still needs to be done. Fixing a broken immigration system. (Applause.) Protecting our kids from gun violence. (Applause.) Equal pay for equal work (Applause.) Paid leave. (Applause.) Raising the minimum wage. (Applause.) All these things still matter to hardworking families. They're still the right thing to do. And I won't let up until they get done. (Applause.)

And I say, "puke." This is a serious review of the state of the nation? This is getting applause for expressing wishes, never mind fulfilling them. Getting applause for expressing a wish. Like the way Obama was given the Nobel Peace Prize even before he took office.

I couldn't believe it when he said progress on "fixing a broken immigration system." (Applause) What? He had seven years to do this but all he did was make it worse. He had to build a fence along the Rio Grande like so many states now in Europe and elsewhere building fences, but he did not. How does this man get applause for saying he wants to fix a broken system when he is one of the major vandals who has refused to fix it and even revels in it?

He gets applause for saying we have to protect our kids from gun violence but says nothing of the growing incidence of violence perpetrated by Muslim maniacs.

It is bad enough that this character acts and speaks the way he does, but it is far worse that he gets the reception he gets.

Serious patriots should not have attended the speech at all, with the smiles and pats on the back, as the Iranians at that very moment were humiliating U.S. Navy personnel and did so to send a message to the region that Iran is now the country in charge, not the U.S.

There is great meaning in those visuals of those captured sailors on their knees with their hands behind their heads. The capture and humiliation of U.S. Navy personnel was a display for the Arabs in the Gulf and the Arabian Peninsula communicating what they already know. The United States under Obama has basically switched sides. The U.S. today under him supports Iran against the Arabs.

And the next day (today) Obama releases another ten from Guantanamo who are likely to return to terror and killing Americans.

Foreign policy analyst, K.T. McFarland, the always levelheaded, said on FOX TV yesterday that she sees an Obama bent on not only emptying Guantanamo of Muslim terrorists but the entire base that has been an American facility since the Spanish-American War of 1898. I think she would agree that Obama sees the U.S. presence there as a relic of U.S. imperialism and thus wants to hand it back to the Cubans

Then, of course, in her view, the Cubans can rent it out and turn it into a base for the Chinese or even the Iranians.

This man is a traitor, but in Congress, not one man or stands up and says, "J'accuse."
