Shalom laYehudim, Shalom laBnai Noach, Shalom laGoyim. It is the evening of the 2nd day, kaf-bes beShvat, Parashas Mishpatim, tav-shin-ayin-vav, the evening of the 1st day, Sunday, 31 January 2016, webcasting from Target Israel, the target of enemies within and without.

Let's see: today there were about a half-dozen Jew-killing attempts resulting in two seriously shot soldiers near Bet El, which means House of G-d, visited by Abraham and his grandson Jacob, now targeted by the a sons of Ishmael.

The shooter was or is a so-called Palestinian Authority policeman; not that Avraham and Jacob ever heard of such a people. As a PA policeman, he course belongs to a constabulary created by the Fatah; you know, the moderate, peace-loving, secular Arabs under Arafat and Abbas -- according to the Oslo cultists. I suppose, then, his weapon today, maybe an M-16 or AK-47, was of the moderate models using moderate bullets.

There was also that stabbing last evening of a young son of Jacob-Israel returning from evening prayers at the Temple Mount where Jacob's father was bound for a simulated sacrifice. The victim was a young American who was not too badly wounded.

There was an attempt today on Rt. 443 to run over a clutch of Israeli warriors but they emerged unscathed and managed to slay the Ishmaelite behind the wheel.

At Bet El, although the shooter hit three Israelite warriors, he himself did not survive. His victim's comrades-in-arms shot him to death, Blessed be the Name of G-d.

These attempted Jew-killings were immediate, tangible, but Israel was also under attack by volleys of words by enemies of the Jewish people abroad and domestic.

We awoke this morning to the story out of France where the Halachic Jew/French Catholic foreign minister, like John Kerry the descendent of cobanim and a Catholic; like a predecessor Margaret Albright in the same role, Halachically a Jewess, raised a Catholic...we awoke to a threat from this current French Catholic apostate Jew Lauren Fabius who seems to be not the brightest of apostates. He threatened Israel that if there is no progress towards negotiating peace, France was going to recognize Balestine as a state.

In addition to his threat, as evidence of the antiJewitis that affects his thinking, he exposed himself as a rather stupid fellow. He demanded that Israel and the Ancient Ones resume negotiating or he is going to organize an international peace conference and, by implication, it will impose peace on the parties by enforcing the creation of a Balestine state to complete the messianic vision of the Two-State Solution.

Prime Minister Netanyahu rightly shot back that his formulation tells the Ancient Ones really to do nothing for peace and receive recognition anyway. Sort of a "heads I win tails you lose situation." Either way, Fabius wants to see the Balestinians in possession of a state. Bibi said in so many words that there will be no international ganging up against us, only face-to-face talks with Ishmaelites today disguised as Balestinians.

What was interesting too in the attack this weekend by Lauren Fabius to recognize a Balestinian state is how he inadvertently he agrees that a Balestinian state coming into existence will be a threat to Israel. Notice he did not present the creation of said state as a beautiful and just solution that will usher in an era of messianic peace. No, he knows at some level of consciousness that this is a threat, a mortal threat to the Jewish state.

And the of course there was that other threat to the Jewish people from within today in the matter of the Western Wall. The government, with the approval of Naftali Bennett who should know better, approved an official recognition of so-called Reform Judaism and Conservative Judaism as authentic forms of Judaism when they are clearly not.

I mean, this is not rocket science. It is a fact that in 1990 it was proven scientifically that Reform Judaism is not an authentic form of Judaism and ironically those who did the proving were the Reform Jews themselves.

They commissioned the first major census of America Jewry in quite a while, and what they came up with was the National Jewish Population Survey that year which exposed the shocking statistic that roughly half of American Jews were not marrying other Jews. This was shocking because this fact was a death sentence.

In 1965, the intermarriage rate for American Jews was only 8%. Then in 1983, the Reform, “leading from behind” so to speak, decided to throw holy water on the reality that the rate had shot up dramatically and Reform’s rabbis, gutless before those who pay them their salaries, trashed a basic law of Judaism thousands of years old and said it was no longer necessary for a Jewish man to have a Jewish wife and vice versa.

Five years later, the head of the Reform movement announced that the intermarriage rate had shot up to 40% and two years later in 1990 it had become 50%.

This is the proof that Reform Judaism is not authentic because if the Jewish people had done nothing except survive over thousands of years of persecution -- forget their contributions to humanity -- it still would be a miracle. Versus the Reform Movement whose population survey made clear American Jewry was in demographic Chapter 11 and going out of business.

In 2013, the Pew Survey suggested that the intermarriage rate among Reform might be now as high as 70 or even 80% -- and here today was the government of Israel foolishly recognizing Reform and Conservative Judaism -- the latter the former’s lapdogs -- as legitimate, authentic forms of Judaism whose big beef -- their claim to being authentically Jewish -- is that they have the right to pray in mixed company like gentiles.

And I say there is a connection between the suicide of the Reform movement via its marital behavior, its blessing of sodomy and lesbianism and its insistence that they have the right to pray in a sexually mixed, gentile fashion as an authentic form of Judaism.

Fortunately, on the ground, the government is just going to enlarge a space for this gentile practice that already exist south along the Wall beyond Robinson’s Arch. But more important to these dejudaizing women who lobbied for this will be the creation of a single path for approaching the Wall before one has to turn off, the Orthodox one way, the Enlightened the other way, as I understand it.

What I found annoying is the foolish belief by Bennett that this will have a favorable impact on Reform Jews in America; they will feel more warmly toward Israel.

He doesn’t get it. The percentage of Reform Jews in America who care about the Jewish people, who want to preserve its existence and care about what goes on at the West Wall, is microscopic. It is only the hacks in their organizations who make a fuss about this issue.

Or maybe Bennett knows this and just wants to get the issue off the front pages; another issue dejudaized antiJews in America use to bash Israel.

What is weird about the whole thing, though, and as evidence that Reform Judaism is nothing but a joke, is that the origin of this movement two years ago in Germany, 1810-1811 was its focus on the rejection of the Temple Mount and the desire to build the Third Temple. The first Reform Jews did everything they could to strip themselves of characteristically Jewish clothing and diet and external appearance in imitation of their gentile neighbors. They cut off their beards, the women uncovered their hair, they dressed like everybody else; they moved the Sabbath from the Sabbath to Sunday and called their meeting house not a synagogue but a temple. Ask a Reform Jew today what is the difference between temple and synagogue and he will look at you crossed-eyed. Huh? He believes they are synonyms because he has no notion of the centrality of the Temple to the Jewish people and the religion.

And in their desperation to be accepted by their gentile neighbors two hundred years ago, they jettisoned the word synagogue where Jews prayed to G-d to return them from exile to build the third and final temple. The Reform said, “We will build our temple right there in Hamburg, in Frankfurt, in Berlin. They were making the statement that they no longer belonged to the Jewish Nation but the German Nation and had no desire to return to Eretz Yisrael and build the Third Temple.

Which is why this demand today to be able to pray at the Wall makes no sense in light of Reform philosophy and belief. The whole movement arose by throwing off any interest in returning to Eretz Israel and to the Temple Mount.

No. These are less Jewish Reformers, I am afraid, than hysterical, neurotic, ignorant women who in their ignorance of the psychological brilliance of Judaism that leads to the separation of sexes at prayer, they think it is just insulting. It is a case of a male chauvinism and tyrannical, patriarchal society, they say.

No, it's not.

Yes, Israel is under attack daily by homicidal Arabs within and by goyim without in the Paris of Lauren Fabius or in Brussels of the EU or New York of the UN and its antiJew secretary-general who said, in so many words, it is just human to Jew-kill.

But we are also under attack from within him by such as the radical ladies of the Reform backed by the their militant sisters in the Diaspora and the Enlightened here at home who this week are incensed that the Im Tirtzu group portrayed their holy men and women as siding with the enemy.

Last week, Im Tirtzu put out a video naming such luminaries as the Enlightened novelist Amos Oz and Enlightened playwright Yehoshua Sobol who belongs to a group called “I am an Israeli” that lobbies to have their Jewish identity expunged from the record in the Ministry of Interior. “I am not a Jew, I am an Israeli,” is the idea. The video labeled these people “foreign agents” and by implication traitors, though I am not sure the video used that word.

In any case, it caused a brouhaha here and Im Tirtzu was attacked even from the Right for its harshness and in the end Im Tirtzu accepted the judgment of many that the video went too far and apologized.

Naftali Bennett said it was “embarrassing, unnecessary and disgraceful.” Miri Regev jumped on that bandwagon even as she is holding her ground against funding from her ministry Israel-bashing works of so-called art.

Boojie Herzog called it “Israeli McCarthyism,” and not for the first time did an Israeli appropriate and misuse an American story.

As I see it, the video was 100% on target but tactically its overkill was counterproductive. Instead of calling these anti-Israel artistes foreign agents, they should have been called the erev rav, the Jewish concept of the mixed multitude. That might have been more appropriate, more Jewish and less shocking.

I think there was an overdose of venom in the video that resulted in a truly powerful smashing of the idols of the Enlightened that caused them great pain. The Enlightened in Israel, the Left, does not worship the G-d of Israel. They have no rabbi to look to for guidance. Their “rabbis” adore the icons of popular culture such as Amos Oz and Yehoshua and Gila Almagor the actress. The video nailed them for what they are, foreign agents, just like the like foreign-funded NGOs but in their narcissism these idols cannot admit to that. They think they are great patriots, these Leftists, critical of Israel for its shortcomings and imperfections because they love Israel so much they want it to be better than it is.

Yes, I think the attack was so wounding for its accuracy that it shut down critical thought. Better than foreign agent, I would have all them labelled the erev rav, the non-Jews who attached themselves to the Hebrews fleeing Egypt and ever since their spirit tugs at the Jewish people to be less Jewish and be more gentile-like. It was the erev rav that was so heavily involved in calling for the construction of what became the Golden Calf. It is the erev rav that motivates Reform Jews to “improve” Judaism by making it more and more like other religions and therefore implicitly less and less Jewish. That is what these Women of the Wall want. They want to be able to pray like gentiles.

The Im Tirtzu attack was an attack on the idols of the Enlightened, and in an unrelated but related story from last week, so was the Labor Party in a dither because the previous weekend, party head Boojie Herzog had met with French President Hollande and told him the two-state solution is not relevant these days. No less than the Im Tirtzu video, Herzog’s statement was experienced as a form of heresy, even apostasy, for the Enlightened in this country worship the Two-State Solution as their god. It is their messianic dream of peace and justice. How dare the head of the Zionist Union a.k.a. the old Labor Party not genuflect before the altar of statehood for the Ancient Ones -- and of course the destruction of the settlements. Oh, how they hate the settlements because the leaders of the movement that created them were old-fashioned, pre-Enlightened, unEnlightened believers in the G-d of Israel. How quaint. How uncool. How primitive.

This is another product of the imperfect and even wrong-headed secular Zionist movement. Like today's Women of the Wall who simultaneously demand to pray at the Wall and dismiss its symbolism as something they don't believe in – praying at the Wall is a substitute for praying in the Temple -- so the secular Zionists held aloft the Bible as their deed to this Land as they simultaneously dismissed the Book as folklore, legend, superstition and bunk.

Boojie Herzog's admission to Hollande that the two-state solution is not in the cards these days, whatever the future may bring, and like calling Amos Oz a foreign agent, the Enlightened here were outraged. How dare Boojie cease believing in the two-state solution which is the instrument the Enlightened use to attack classical Jews in Judea and Samaria.

Oh, how they snarl at us for still believing in the G-d of our fathers and for not joining the world community in weeping over the plight of the ancient victims of Zionism.

Yes indeedly, Israel's enemies within are as toxic as those without. Last week, the Enlightened in their headquarters, otherwise known as TV Channel 2, criticized a new high school civics book produced by the Education Ministry. It was attacked because it is too Jewish Nationalist in orientation, they said; that's the Israeli version of "too Jewish."

No, they complained, there was no emphasis on Israel as a Jewish and a democratic state, not enough emphasis on the non-Jews in this country. The Enlightened complained there was not enough blame placed upon the inciters who triggered the Rabin assassination – when I have yet to see any evidence that incitement existed, let alone caused that assassination.

This is so typical of the Left. Criticize their ideas and policies and they claim the critic is inciting people to murder them. This is how it was 20 years ago. Oslo kicked in July 1994 and the massacres began almost immediately, the terror bombings. Opponents angrily pointed at the insanity of bringing into the country tens of thousands of PLO terrorists, and for this the Enlightened said they were inciting people to assassinate the prime minister, presumably by daring to oppose his big idea that was blowing up in our faces, literally, all over the country.

And then there was another attack last week on Holocaust Remembrance Day -- of all days -- in the pages of Haaretz --that is truly a foreign agent of a newspaper these days, financed by German investors of all people. It was a review of a new book by an Israeli academic, an historian of the Holocaust davka, one Yair Aron whose latest book is called, "The Non-Jewish Victims of the Nazi Regime." And the headline of the review was, "Genocide scholar blasts Israel's racist approach toward teaching the Holocaust."

It is his thesis is that Israel prefers to avoid, repress and minimize the suffering of other peoples in the Holocaust and other circumstances, to perpetuate (Jewish) victimization and isolationism. “Instead of shaping Holocaust commemoration through humanist and democratic values, Israel is unknowingly, and perhaps for many knowingly, fostering racism and xenophobia. Ignorance of the non-Jewish victims is perhaps the most concrete manifestation of this trend.”

And I say this is just another example of the worldwide crackup of the intelligentsia in the West, in Western institutions of higher learning, a.k.a. its universities and colleges.

This is just the same-old same-old over thousands of years, mentioned on the webcast last week, of people pointing the finger of guilt at the Jews for being greedy Jews, hogging the honor of being the Chosen People; of having a special covenant with G-d to the exclusion of others; hogging a claim to the Land of Israel to the exclusion of the Ancient Ones; hogging in this case a monopoly on tears for the Holocaust. Here is this Israeli academic whining that Israeli Jews think only of themselves and their suffering during the Holocaust to the exclusion of others who also suffered.

This is like Samantha Power writing a Pulitzer-Prize-winning book on genocides in the plural – and never mind the word was invented by a Jewish survivor of World War II, a man who spoke nine languages and could read five others. He knew of no word in any of these languages to describe what the Nazis had done to him and his family and his people, and so he made one up.

Like the Jews who were given a book by the Almighty. Along came the Christians and they took had to have a holy book; along came the Muslims and they too had to have a holy book; along came the Mormons and they too had to have a holy book.

And now here is this Israeli academic angry at the Jews for hogging the Holocaust as exclusively a Jewish matter.

I'd say, “Give me a break,” but I am resigned to the eternal struggle until Moshiach arrives before our enemies, foreign and domestic, stop snarling and clawing at the Jews for being their greedy, arrogant, selfish beliefs.

And how dare they claim all the land west of the Jordan to be the exclusive possession of the Jewish people?

Last item. Yesterday, the New York Times endorsed Hillary Clinton for president. I read the editorial endorsement and ended up almost in tears. I said to myself, “USA, RIP” Rest in peace. America is finished.

I could not believe what I read. An endorsement claiming that she is one of the most deeply qualified presidential candidates in modern history and then listed her job titles as senator and secretary of state but not one accomplishment in either position.

The praise for her was for her attitudes. She is “a strong advocate of effective measures to combat the plague of firearms.” But of course no mention of plan of action. Also, “One of the most attractive parts of Mrs. Clinton’s economic platform is her pledge to support the well-being and rights of working Americans.” How about that! Mentioned as well was “her lifelong fight for women...” and so on and so forth.

The emptiness of this endorsement bespeaks a mindlessness in the American people these days that is terrifying. That some Americans, that the editorial writers at the New York Times, are still behind this woman after all that is known of her reckless insensitivity to handling classified information; her paralysis during the attack on Benghazi, not to mention the financial corruption engaged in while in office...

I found this editorial scary for its empty, brainless, uncritical thinking. Where have all the leaders gone? What has happened to an electorate now lacking in all judgment?
