Shalom laYehudim, Shalom laBnai Noach, Shalom laGoyim. It is the evening of the 6th day, kaf-beh beSivan, Parashas Korach, tav-shin-ayin-vav, the evening of the 5th day, Thursday, 30 June 2016, webcasting from the Promised Land that the Ishmaelites claim is really theirs, and because we stole it from them, they have the right to, in a morning, climb into an open window of a house where Jews live and stab to death anyone or all of them and then be shot to death himself by Jews.

One can only imagine the nightmare this morning that little 13 year-old, beautiful Hallel-Yaffa Ariel awoke into, aroused by blows to her body, eight knife strikes at the hands of yet another 17-year-old Arab clone of his forefather Ishmael, who at age 17 was expelled from his father's tents.

A security guard who came to the rescue was also seriously wounded before another guard destroyed this Arab animal with the knife. A wild ass of a man with rabies or something. What kind of a culture produces these homicidal maniacs driven by insane hatred on all non-Muslims in general and in particular Jews because that is what the Koran preaches? Jews are a Believer's biggest enemy, "even more than Christian priests," the verse in the Koran says.

Thousands of people came to her funeral today in Hevron, the very same town we read about in the Bible, the site of the "family plot" of the Jewish people, the Cave of our Patriarchs and our Matriarchs, the first three generations, that the sons of Ishmael insist is theirs too and that we stole it from them and they want it back.

Ishmael is like an animal who is all appetite unbridled by any ethical constraint, any respect for other people. He truly was a descendent of Ham on his mother's side.

The Arabs, chronic and compulsive thieves, claim to be Semites because they come from Avraham but Jews don't go by the father. His half-brother Yitzhak was a Semite because his mother was Sarah, as great a figure among women in her day as her husband was among men.

No, Arabs are not Semites; this claim is something else they stole. They are Hamites. And who was Ham? Born before the Great Flood, he more than his two brothers, who took after their father Noah, took after other people in the world at that time when they were all unbridled aggression that so saddened and angered HaShem. He chose to wipe out His greatest creation.

The Torah teaches that the sin that was the final straw was called hamas, from the word ham meaning hot, as in hotheaded, hot-blooded, impulsive. It was this unbridled violence toward others that brought on the destruction of G-d's finest creation, and it seems as if Ham, who survived the Flood, was the most infected with hamas and brought it over into the world after the Flood.

For Jews, the word hamas is the worst sin of all. But the same word in Arabic, the name of the Muslim Brotherhood branch here means the zenith of religious enthusiasm, a state of ecstasy, passion, zeal, that they bring on themselves via murdering Jews and being killed by the Jews at the same time.

Islam is one sick state of mind. It is a lie when people talk of the "three great monotheistic religions," or the "three great Abrahamic religions." This is not a cliché Jews can sign off on. Islam formally believes in one G-d but in practice a better name for the faith would be Mohammadanism, which a century ago was a respectable name for this cult. The first book I ever read in college on Islam was called Mohammadanism by famed scholar H.A.R. Gibb, a classic.

Mohammadanism is a better name because Islam stands for belief in One G-d but that is hardly an identifying marker of Islam; it not an original idea at all. What distinguishes this community is not monotheism but its fanatical allegiance to Muhammad who seems to have been a kind of charismatic, unbelievably cruel and ruthless Charles Manson-type of gang leader. He was the greatest head chopper of his generation, a real psychopath.

And that why I get angry when people today talk of "Islamism" and "Islamists" or "radical Muslims" or "Muslim extremists" because the intent in each one of these new locutions that have been around for a few decades now is to make the claim that these violent terrorists are outliers, extremists, unrepresentative of Islam.

In effect, the message of a Daniel Pipes who was among the first of the propagators of the terms "Islamist" and "Islamism" is that of Barack Obama essentially saying the same thing. Every time a Muslim like a rabid dog goes berserk and creates a bloodbath among innocent people, devotees of the new vocabulary want you think, "Oh," for example, "Capt. Hassan down there at Ft. Hood was not a Muslim. He was an Islamist! Islam is a peaceful religion and is not to be confused with Islamism, this militant offshoot of extremists, who turn peaceful Islam into a militant doctrine of violence and conquest, which is not representative of the real Islam.”

Trouble is, the words Islamism and Islamist are not used by the Arab Muslims themselves. They are inventions of Western academics for their own non-scholarly purposes. By and large, these academic Islam experts are not comfortable thinking that their field of expertise is a religion of homicidal maniacs, but unfortunately it is. It is as if an academic study of Hasidic sects reported on a sect that did not exist except in the academic’s imagination. Who are these Western intellectuals to come up with a category for Muslims that the Muslims themselves do not recognize?

The problem with Islam is not that all Believers are bent on violence; the problem is that those who are find ample support for their violence in the Koran. Much of the Koran describes battles Muhammad waged. It is a religion drenched in blood. Think of the Ashura Shiite holiday when young men walk through the streets with razor blades in their hands slashing their scalps to make themselves bleed; like some of the Spanish Catholic crucifixes where blood streams from the crown of the thorns onto the face of Jesus. That is what these Shiites look like with their razors.

It is a bloody religion. Thank G-d Israel has none of this imagery.

So today was another day of crying by thousands of Jews, whose tears these Muslims love to see. These Arab Muslims, these Persian Muslims, these Turkish Muslims are capable of such cruelty, such savage tortures and diabolical and creative ways of murdering people: drowning them in cages, chopping off their heads; burning them on spits like roasting an animal.

I was reminded of that today at the news of the latest eruption of satanic evil in the hands of yet another crazed Arab Muslim lunatic. I was pleased, if that is the word, when I heard the radio coverage of the day and Hallel-Yaffa’s mother speaking, choking through her tears, who still had the presence of mind to refer to the murder of her daughter as an Arab Muslim terrorist, not a “Palestinian.” Eshet kbayil, a “woman of valor.” It was heartbreaking to listen to her, and once against the thousands who went to the funeral today, all of them, surely shed tears of pain and horror at the behavior of such beasts. One of my grandmother’s Yiddish expressions behemas afn tsvai feese / “beasts on two feet” comes to mind.

How long will it take for Israel’s ruling class to understand that the enemy is not Palestinian Nationalism but age-old Mohammadanism, with its hatred of Jews fueling the furnace burning in its black heart?

Western culture, other cultures, judge such behaviors as we saw today as the work of a psychopath, a nutjob, a homicidal maniacs.

But in Arab Muslim society... parents of such demons like those of this latest 17 year-old murderer-suicide were portrayed in the PA media as proud. He was a shahid, a martyr for the cause. A holy man, Islam's version of a hero, a saint.

As Mosab Hassan Yusuf said, the son of the Hamas headman in Yashar who collaborated with the GSS, the problem with Islam is that its god is a cruel god. And I say, this is not Abraham's god.

And I also say, "Bull's eye." This is one of the classic definitions of paganism in my book. In the pagan universe, the gods, the powers, are not merciful. They don't make demands of man to be virtuous. They don't care about man's fate. And among themselves, the pagan gods, their own behavior is commonly reprehensible. In the age of Aristotle and the great tragedian playwrights, man looked down on the gods because they were immortal could never be courageous; they had no fear of death. They lacked as well empathy for one and another and for man. They were not seen as man's Creator Who loved them but independent forces in the universe, projections of man's own character at its worst.

Islam in this way remains a pagan religion whose devotees echo with memories of humankind before the great Flood. They are in Freudian terms all Id, all appetite unrestrained by any sense of ethics and morality.

Today, like a wild ass, another Arab youth unbridled by human empathy murdered a beautiful Jewish girl.

Israel has to shift gears...but first some music.

And that was one of the Thirteen Principles of Faith according to Maimonides: I believe in the coming of the Messiah.

So the question remains as always after these grotesque outbursts of horror perpetrated by these savages is what to do with them. Early this evening, I think, the army went to level the home where the murderer lived, but I am not sure. I heard the clan he belonged to would lose their work permits in Israel, or something like that.

I think Israel has to go back to the good old days after the Six-Day War when it was cool to be pro-Israel and kick Arabs out of the country for behavior like this and even lesser sins. That was the practice for some 20 years until the 1980s when under Rabin, with his record of spineless retreat throughout his life, after expelling Hamas leaders to Lebanon then knuckled under to foreign pressure to bring them back, and we have not seen this punishment since then.

I remember meeting during the first intifada in 1988 with one of the legends of the generation of the 1930 and 40s, Hayim Levakov, ז"ל born in the Galilee. He spoke fluent Arabic; he fought under Orde Wingate in the counter-terror raids in 1936-39; he served in Arab lands after the war as a spy, and he told me the government at the time, in 1988, was mishandling the riots. He knew the Arabs well and it was possible to live with them, he said, but you had to deal with them in a certain way. He said the way to deal with the stone-throwers is not to arrest them, try them in a military court and then put them in prison. He said you have to capture them immediately be taken home to their parents, and with their parents and siblings, all should be driven down to a Jordan River crossing and kicked out of the country. He said that would have parents all over Judea and Samaria telling their kids, "Don't you act up like this. I don't want to become a homeless refugee in Jordan."

I think Minister Israel Katz today has already expressed the view that the family of the murderer should be expelled from the country tonight. I'd drink to that.

But I would also like to see our leaders speak out and call for an end to the fantasy of the Two-State Solution which says, quite simply, all Jews must leave Judea and Samaria, and the Arabs will take over.

And I say it is time to put that fantasy to rest and speak some truth to the planet, to the world community, and make the point that these Arabs here are "not ready for prime time." They have shown over more than two decades now of huge financial and political support from outside that they are incapable of self-government and under no circumstances will Israel relinquish control of all the land west of the Jordan River, period. We would have to be as insane as these murderers in a different way to think that we would improve our lives by retreating from the high ground and turning everything over to the Ishmaelites.

Look at Gaza. Look at Syria, at Iraq, at Yemen, at Lebanon, Algeria, one Arab land after another where the Arabs are always killing each other.

I think of the history of the Middle East in just my lifetime. Always turmoil, always coups d'état, always palace revolts, assassinations sectarian wars. In my book, I chronicle it all, the ever-spinning kaleidoscope of Middle Eastern current events: the gang wars in southern Lebanon in the 1970s and 80s between the different PLO factions. The PLO at one time had as many as 18 different terror groups and they fought gang wars between them.

The gang wars in southern Lebanon between the Sunni PLO gangs and the Shiite Lebanese gangs, the locals; the gang wars between the pro-Iran Lebanese Shiite gangs and their brothers, the anti-Iran Lebanese Shiite gangs.

In 1962, Nasser invaded Yemen to back the Arab socialists in overthrowing the Shiite Imams who had ruled there for a thousand years, and used mustard gas on the opposition, his own fellow Muslims, the gas outlawed since WWI, I think.

There was the Lebanese Civil War 1975-1989, 150,000 people killed; not soldiers in uniform fighting on a battlefield; all civilians; the Muslim rebellion in Algeria in the 1990s, another 200,000 dead. Arabs killings Arabs. And today there are than 200,000 dead in Syria since 2011.

Israel's post-religious Zionists believed that if they transformed themselves and brought the Land of Israel back to life, the Arabs would benefit too and become grateful for the benefits to them that Zionism would bring. Herzl, Chaim Weizman, Lawrence of Arabia and others were all optimistic about the benefits to the Arabs that Zionism would afford them and thus make them friendlier. And especially since the Zionists had shed the old arrogance of being the Chosen People the hatred would disappear.

Yes, I want Israel to revert to the way it used to be, when Israel carried itself in the wake of the Six-Day War, proud and not feeling guilty in the slightest for its victory. No one in Israel at the time, no one in the liberal democratic West, thought when the fighting ended that Israel had to make a U-turn and race back out of the territory it had just captured in the fighting. No one said that.

No one challenged the right of Israel to rule in Judea and Samaria in June 1967, or the next month in July 1967, in August 1967 and so on and so forth every month since then, almost a half-century now. Our presence in Judea and Samaria is today as moral and as legal and as right as it has always been.

This business of the "occupation" explaining the hostility is rubbish. The truth is that the settlements have absolutely nothing to do with the hostility. This is a known fact of history. The hostility directed at us by the Arabs in Judea and Samaria in early 1967 had absolutely nothing to do with settlements because there weren't any. There was no "occupation." The hostility was a pre-existing condition.

What Israelis have tragically lost is the self-assurance, the self-confidence, the belief in themselves as having the right to rule in Judea and Samaria even after almost half a century. And the horror today in Kiryat Arba is another example of why Israel has to continue to rule in these hills. Without the presence of the Jewish communities and the army and the police, life west of the 1949 cease-fire would become intolerable. It is for the sake of the coastal plain we have to remain here.

And it is time for Israelis to proudly shoot down the inhuman demands of the Two-State Solution and the immorality of that proposal: the alleged rightness of driving hundreds of thousands of Jews from homes they have every moral and legal right to live in. That would be an expulsion greater than the Spanish Expulsion. I find it simply mindboggling that any Jew, anybody, still thinks seriously of the inhuman demands of the Two-State Solution.

With people here, our neighbors like this rabid, wild ass of a bloodthirsty beast on two feet who crept into a Jewish apartment this morning and knifed a Jewish girl to death, stabbed her 8 times, her blood was all over the bed and floor. With monsters like these, we must stay here forever.

* * (Musical Interlude) * *

So aside from today's nation in tears over the latest eruption of Arab-Muslim evil, the top story was the vote in the Security Cabinet for the Turkey deal, 7 to 3, and since the case made by Netanyahu and Dore Gold, director of the Foreign Ministry was the paramount menace of belligerent -- my word not his -- Islam in the region, and by implication Israel and Turkey faced the same danger. This argument seemed to carry much weight.

The horror at Ataturk Airport in Istanbul this week is believed to be ISIS which puzzles some because Erdogan & Co. are themselves aggressive Muslim Believers and in the past Erdogan had tolerated ISIS using Turkey in its aggression against Assad in Syria, whom Erdogan can't stand.

But, like the Sorcerer's Apprentice who got out of hand, ISIS is now reported to be hostile to Turkey, and why? Erdogan is seen as too open to the West, not pure enough in Islamic doctrine and fervor, so ISI sent those three lunatics to shoot people at random and blow themselves up.

And I am here to tell you this is an old, old pattern in Araby. In every generation, young Muslim bucks envious of the local despot claim he is corrupt and a hypocrite who is not religious enough. And what the rebels promise is a real Muslim regime after they overthrow the current one.

It is another instance of Ishmael's hunger for wealth that does not belong to him, for power and domination over others, and his use of Islam as a justification for his appetite for wealth and power.

So in JPost today in commentary on the deal with Turkey, the Security Cabinet affirmed it. And it was claimed that Erdogan is now being targeted by the ISIS that he once supported, and the three suicide freaks at the airport were ISIS agents striking at Erdogan, weakening the Turkish economy especially in summer when the tourist trade is normally at its strongest.

In other words, what is going on now in Turkey and Iraq and Syria and Yemen is an old-old story. It is reasonable to assume that the turmoil and fratricide in just my lifetime alone is characteristic of one 70-year period after another over thousands of years.

And this is one major reason why Israel must be realistic and demand that the world let us be realistic and stop this lunacy of thinking it would be a good idea to turn most of Judea and Samaria over to the Muslims.

Israel could do worse than tell the world these Arabs are incapable of civilized self-rule. Indeed, they are morally unqualified for self-rule. The PA media has already beatified the 17-year-old monster who murdered sweet like Hallel-Yaffa today, hy'd. Israel has to tell the world that when Abbas tells the EU parliament that Israel is poisoning wells and massacring Balestinians, he exposes himself as unfit for the responsibility of running a state. He is nothing but a thug.

And by the way, an added detail to my reportage on Abbas' speech in Brussels the other day, when he spewed these medieval lies: at the end, which I did not tell you, he was given a standing ovation.

And this is another good reason why Brexit can be a blessing if it leads to the complete collapse of the corrupt EU bureaucracy.

Last item: Please check out the DPP blog for the last Tuesday webcast and find, I hope, a link posted to Memri.org video. If it is not there, it is video number 5536. It is 5 minutes long and is a must-see. It is a boy preacher in a Jordanian mosque preaching like a robot, barking one antisemitic fantasy lie after another.

And you'll see that this is what Israel is up against that has nothing to do with the absence of statehood for the legendary "Palestinian" people of ancient times.

It never occurred to the European Ashkenazi Jews who dreamed up secular Zionism that Islam was as theologically hateful of Jews as Christendom could be and was from time to time, let alone entertain the idea, as I do, that Islamic antiJewism is even worse. In hindsight, the early Zionists appear to have been tragically uneducated about the life and history of Jews living under Muslim rule for fourteen centuries.

And today's Israelis have yet to catch up.

Anyway, Leila tov and Shabbat shalom from the hills of Judea endlessly irrigated with warm Jewish blood.
