Shalom laYehudim, Shalom laBnai Noach, Shalom laGoyim. It is the evening of the 6th day, kaf-gimmel beTammuz, Parashas Matos, tav-shin-ayin-vav, the evening of the 5th day, Thursday, 28 July 2016, webcasting from the Judean hills that Israel must never give up, shouldn't have to give up, because this land legally and morally belongs to the Jewish people.

And this morning we had another lesson in why we must never give it up. It was an interesting day for this reason. JPost reported on the hunting down and killing of the Arab murderer who murdered Rabbi Miki Mark, b"y, who left behind a seriously injured wife and ten now orphaned children, and in a completely separate news story, reported on was a talk given yesterday at Bar-Ilan University by "Bogie" Yaalon, the former defense minister, in which he criticized those on the right – from the right! – who say they will accept an Israeli military presence in Judea and Samaria but Israeli sovereignty in the Jordan Valley is not necessary there. Yaalon described that as dangerous. He was criticizing the right from the right.

This is not hawkish enough him because he said that if Israel ever gives up "freedom to operate in Judea and Samaria, the Palestinian Authority won't survive, and the Jordanian kingdom will fall too."

He then went on, in his bitterness at having been sacked and rightly so, I think, by Netanyahu, to accuse the prime minister and the government of corruption. But his foreign policy vis-a-vis the Arabs has not budged a millimeter since being fired and remains identical to Bibi's view, who only hides behind the smoke screen of wanting the two-state solution when he clearly does not, and for the same reasons as Bogie does not.

So, it was an interesting coincidence, reading about Bogie's lecture on one page, and on the other the news that the Muslim barbarian that killed the rabbi was surrounded in his "safe house." He was ordered to come out. He answered instead with gunfire.

I think our guys traded a few shots with him but then used an anti-tank missile fired to the house. Nonetheless, he still kept firing so, as many times before, they called in the D9-er produced by Caterpillar, the armored bulldozer which looks like it could survive a direct hit of anything short of an atomic bomb, that drives into the house in this situation, knocks the house down and mounts the fallen walls to ride over and crush the murderer underneath to death.

I think the horrible murder of Rabbi Micki was on the first of July, so it took four weeks for our police, Border Guard, IDF, GSS and their informers to hunt this wild ass of a man down and destroy him like a wild jackass with rabies, or one had eaten too much loco weed, or something. And it could not have happened if the antiJew Jews here and antiJew Jews and goyim abroad had their wish and all Jews were driven from Judea and Samaria. Without the presence of all these security agencies, that murderer would not have been found and terminated.

In fact, that is how it was here in the 1950s. Then the Arabs called themselves fedayeen and routinely shot out of Judea and Samaria across the 1949 ceasefire line, which was no barrier, in order to murder Jews at random. There were times in the early 1950s when one could not drive from Tel-Aviv to Jerusalem without an army escort. It got so bad, Israel went to war in 1956 against Egypt because of the terrorist penetrations from Gaza and Sinai. This is when the murderers called themselves, as I say, fedayeen, meaning those who sacrifice themselves and also, I think, because it shares the same verbal root with the Hebrew lifdot/podeh, meaning to redeem. The fedayeen also redeemed Arab honor for the cosmic humiliation of having lost in 1948-49 to the miserable Jews over whom they had tyrannized for fourteen centuries. And this was before these men were told -- they were never told this before -- that they were the Ancient Palestinian people at home in their ancient homeland since the beginning of time.

This was before they started calling themselves "freedom fighters" in a "war of national liberation," just like the Americans who fought the tyrannical English in the Revolutionary War. With the invention of the Balestinians, no more fedayeen, no more religious imagery. Following the FLN in Algeria, they recast their war against Jewish freedom in non-religious terms more pleasing to the brains of the post-religious intellectuals in the West.

So it was reassuring this morning to read of “Bogie” Yaalon’s fidelity to his own long-held, sober views of the Arabs, and this item on the raid on Tuesday night in the Arab settlement of Tsurif in Judea, when our crack, anti-terror units closed in on that wild animal in human form and destroyed him. If Israel were to abandon Judea and Samaria, Hamas would take over and the whole place would become another Gaza Strip.

Thus, yours truly has for years had no fears of being abandoned by the government like so many friends in the settlements. They think Bibi will betray us and hand Judea and Samaria and all of its Jews over to the Hamites. But he will never do that because it is not in his interest and that of Tel-Aviv. They may not like us settlers but they are not stupid. There is no sober person in Israel who thinks we can give up the high ground.

Here was the last of the idealistic kibbutzniks “Bogie” Yaalon expounding on this idea. Israel simply cannot abandon the hills of Judea and Samaria to the Arabs so long as they remain Arabs and Muslims. Which they will remain for the indefinite future. And as Arabs and Muslims, they simply would not be satisfied even if given all of a Jew-free Judea and Samaria. That is returning to the situation pre-’67. As Arabs, they would continue to covet the remaining wealth of the Jews. And as Muslims, they cannot in good conscience sign off on a free Jewish state within any lines.

This is what the Oslo ignoramuses did not see and not understand. Oslo was predicated on the belief that if Israel hands over Yesha, that would be the end of the conflict. Hand Yesha back and the Arabs will begin smiling from ear to ear. Their hands will be extended in friendship between Jews and Ancient Palestinians, ready for a warm and brotherly embrace, and the two peoples would live happily ever after as good neighbors. And never mind a plain reading of Arab propaganda throughout the decades that made clear their desire to destroy all of Israel as it was before 1967.

In a funny way, the whole issue of the settlements is more camouflage. It covers up the truth that, in a funny way, the settlements have nothing to do with the hostility. Fact: These people were hostile before 1967. The settlements did not exist and to speak of them today is a distraction.

As the prime minister rightly said this week, Israel recognizes the right to a state for the “Palestinians,” but the “Palestinians” do not recognize the right of a state for Jews. That’s the problem, he said. It is not the settlements, and he is right. It is not Judea and Samaria.

The hunting down of that murderer and killing him story also revealed another facet of Israel that should change. It turns out that this guy, this murderer, was one of the ones released for Gilad Shalit. But don’t expect an intrepid, politically correct journalist here to interview Shalit’s father and ask him how he feels now after his campaign for his son, after having heard this news.

In all honesty, I rarely read about these IDF operations read in detail because they are so similar, so I am not sure, but I think one or more this guy's collaborators who were arrested before the attack, also were freed in that mass release.

This is exactly what people said would happen, and it has happened. Actually, I think it has happened hundreds of times. The Almagor NGO, the victims of terror organization, have the numbers, and I think something like two hundred Jews have been murdered over the years by terrorists who had been imprisoned and then let go.

It is a crime to murder anybody. It is a crime for the government of Israel to free such men who then go on to murder. Israel has to return to an earlier policy of expulsion. Israel must proudly announce to the world that this is the Promised Land, the Land of the Jewish people, and we decide who lives here and who must go.

In the future, we have to expel immediately the relatives of murderers after an attack. We should expel even more: the terrorists in our prisons. There are thousands of them whom we should take up to the Golan and push over the line into Syria. Syria no longer exists and none would stop this action.

Overall, though, I am pretty optimistic. This week Abbas said he wants to sue England for the Balfour Declaration, which the prime minister said is proof of what he is saying. They are still at war with Balfour that declared the rightness of Jews having their own homeland in their own ancient homeland.

And it is more evidence of the brainless stupidity and ignorance of the Oslo dreamers who I contend were motivated most of all by their desire to destroy the resurrection of Jewish life in Judea. What did these atheists care about the heart of Jewish history, when Judaism is just another example of religion, you know, the "opiate of the masses"?

And that was Psalm 121.

Yes, Israel simply cannot give up Judea and Samaria and survive. The belief in the "two-state solution" is belief in the creation of yet another nation-state for the Arabs after Syria, even after Iraq, after Yemen, after Libya, after all of these have come apart. Massacres and counter-massacres.

Were Israel to abandon Judea and Samaria, the same chaos we see in Gaza would engulf these hills. The fantasy of the two-state solution is that Israel and the half-million Jews will skedaddle out of here and the Arabs take over and create a nice, cute, little garden apartment of a state next door and become our friendly neighbors. A quiet, peaceful, well-run boutique of a state, even smaller than Israel; a place of happy citizens no longer violent, no longer telling fairy tales about the unreality of the Holocaust, no longer preaching that the coastal plain from Jaffa down though Ashqelon to Gaza is all theirs.

Israel has to, for its own sake, its own peace of mind, adopt a healthy self-love and accept that our Muslim neighbors are not very nice and the more we ignore them the better. Israelis have to stop trying to make peace and to be loved by them. We have only one obligation and that is to defend ourselves from them.

We also heard of a case today of a Jewish community's swimming pool in the Galilee whose administration is barring Arabs from using it.

Is this evidence of Israelis racism? No. This is evidence of Israelis keeping up with the news and knowing that the situation in Germany for females has become unpleasant, to say the least. The community does not want teenage Arab males hanging out in the same pool as young Jewish girls because of their behavior. It is their behavior, not their race, whatever that is. Their appearance is absolutely irrelevant. We have more dark people than they do. Skin color has nothing to do with the barring of these boys from these facilities that were built by and for Jewish people.

I think Israelis are growing up in this regard as well. That is how I would describe "Bogie" Yaalon's worldview: realistic and not twisted by political correctness from the nonsense of the socialist collectives that he has made his life in.

Consider life in our neighbors' countries. Syria, where its number one commercial city Aleppo now looks like Berlin ca. 1945, block after block of rubble and ruined, shattered buildings.

Look at life in Iraq and Yemen and now Turkey, which for a generation and a half was a de facto ally of Israel. There were commercial ties that still exist, but no longer are there military sales to Turkey and Israeli pilots no longer train in Turkish Air space; and what the current Sultan in Istanbul has done since the so-called failed putsch is to strive to finish off any remembrance of the age of Ataturk. The Turks are reverting to their pre-Ataturk culture of corruption and cruelty.

In the age of the Ottoman Empire, every one of Turkey's neighboring peoples had folk expressions such as "Cruel as a Turk" or "Stupid as a Turk." What they did to the Armenians in 1915 was as evil on an individual, human basis -- if the not collective -- as the Holocaust. The horrors they inflicted on the Armenians were no less monstrous.

And now, not surprisingly, more reports are coming out Turkey of how Erdogan has not only rounded up tens of thousands of people as suspected enemies of his rule, reports are coming out of the cruelty of Erdogan's loyalists who not only arrest suspected enemies but beat them and whip and torture them and rape them. In the eyes of the regime's loyalists, these people are traitors and deserve what they get.

And no one should be surprised at reports of imprisoned soldiers and teachers and journalists, the men, being raped by their jailers. We saw that in the Hollywood movie Midnight Express in the 1970s. People have no idea how common this behavior is in Islam. It is common among males denied all contact with females and as a form of domination and humiliation in situations like this one.

Also, there is a moment like that in the film Veronica Guerin, the true story of an Irish journalist played by Cate Blanchett, who is out to expose a major drug dealer who threatens that if she does not back off, he will kidnap her ten-year old boy and “ride him,” do this to him big time.

The Clarion Project this week reported on the torture, the starvation, the beating and rape of those arrested in Turkey during what many people now believe was a phony putsch. It failed because it was meant to fail. The whole thing was a setup to allow Erdogan to cripple all opposition to his dreams of returning Turkey to being a superpower, a caliphate enforcing sharia law. He is a big fan of Hamas, this character.

These arrests countrywide have been massive, but we have yet to hear a word of this from his erstwhile advisee Barack Hussein Obama.

No, I did not watch his speech last night at the Democratic Convention. I did not have the stomach for that. Last webcast, I said it is a world gone mad and that is what I see in Obama, his wife, Hillary, all these people giving speeches and popping off about this issue or that when they don’t believe a word they are saying. All of them tell the audience what the audience wants to hear.

Last night, Obama said Hillary was “the most qualified ever to run for the office of president.” Do words have any meaning to this man? His own wife in her speech said America was the greatest country in the world; this from the same woman who before she moved into the White House said she never felt proud to be an American.

As her husband recently said America had to accept a tidal wave of Muslims from Syria because that who we are, an “exceptional people.” This from the same dissembler who said eight years ago America was not exceptional.

We live in evil times when evil people are raised up to the status of our leaders.

* * (Musical Interlude) * *

Yes, I did not watch the Democratic Convention last night and all of the speeches. It was late here, but in all seriousness I couldn’t take it. I saw only a one-minute clip of the convention floor in which the Hillary-ites were chanting, “Hillary! Hillary! Hillary!” with expressions on their faces looking up an image of her on a screen like those seen on adolescent girls ogling their favorite rock star idol at a rock concert.

And idolatry is the only word for it. I saw idolatry in their eyes. I can’t believe that there are so many people in the States who still want to vote for this woman. They have lost all critical faculties. Obama says Hillary is the most qualified candidate ever, and gets a round of applause and cheering. Are these people thinking?

It really is idolatry, and I think the idol is this woman in a pants suit, traditionally male apparel, in her speeches always coming off abrasively and stridently, and I finally figured out why she is so unappealing in this mode. It is because she is trying to sound and act like a tough guy, like a tough man.

In a way, she is (!) the most qualified candidate if not for all time than this moment in time in this generation when many of her supporters think that Bruce Jenner has become a woman. I'm saying there is a connection between the careers of these two prominent Americans, and in both cases they are figures of the mixing of the sexes which has always in history been nothing but a fantasy. There is no record of a true hermaphrodite who had both male and female productive organs and alternatively fathered children and gave birth to children. Or had sex with himself/herself and out came a baby.

What comes to mind is the Greek myth of Tiresias the blind prophet who at one point was changed into a woman and seven years later changed back into a man. Artists in history painted him with female breasts, and playwrights and poets have written poems and plays entitled "The Breasts of Tiresias."

Both Hillary and Bruce and all the other so-called transgenders have much in common. I watched that minute of the Democratic Convention and the starry-eyed conventioners swooning over the fact that for the first time ever a woman has been the role of a man, so Hillary's essential merit is not her performance in politics, not her leadership of men under fire.

No, she has become the idol of those focused not on the brain inside her head or the quality of her heart. She has become an idol for those who focus lower down in her anatomy below her head, below her heart. What is important, her most qualifying characteristic, is her reproductive organs, as if that is where a person thinks. It is more important than that heart. It is a victory for human beings with a womb which, as far I have heard, is not a place for thinking, for decision-making, pondering moral dilemmas and social policy, figuring out how to handle the enemy.

These Hillary fanatics are focused on her groin. This is why they want to vote for her. This is why she is more qualified than any man in history. She has a womb.

I think her candidacy is the culmination of the collapse of the culture that began in the 1960s with the invention of the sexually confused unisex barber. Remember that?

It is the culmination of the glorification of men perversely imitating normal sexuality with another man as normal and healthy, with those opposed to that behavior now diagnosed to be suffering from a mental disorder, an irrational fear, a phobia of what the "gays" do.

Homosexuality is without a doubt the most dishonestly discussed issue in the public arena, bar none, for the simply reason it has never been discussed. I have never once in the media over forty years seen or heard or read a discussion of the behaviors that the "gays" engage in. The discussion is always about love between people of the same sex, which is rubbish.

Love between men? Does it exist? You bet. I'll give you real love between men: Consider the IDF officer in 2006 Roi Klein who jumped on a live grenade, said Shma Israel and gave his life to save his soldiers. Now that's real love between men.

Entering "gay bars" for perverse sexual encounters has nothing to do with love.

And how ironic that on the one hand we read about Turkish brutes violating fellow Turks, at the same time in the West sodomy is beatified.

Every time Hillary and the Democrats play the woman card, they are saying, 'Pay no attention to her decision-making, her foreign policy judgments like bringing down Gaddafi and Mubarak; like abandoning men under fire in Benghazi and then lying about it; like disregarding email security protocols; like stuffing her pockets with cash from foreign countries when she was secretary of state. Playing the woman card says, "Pay none of this any mind. Look at her anatomy."

And as she tries to act like a tough male, vote for her anatomy. Everyone knows this the seat of intelligence and character. It is not in the brain, not in the heart. And pay no mind that she used it only once because she wanted more in life to imitate a powerful man to give birth to and love and nurse and raise babies. It has been said that Hillary initially wanted no children but was advised that it would not be advantageous to her political career, so she had one. That is who Chelsea is.

This is feminism at its absolute worst: the liberation of the female defined as refraining from bearing children and instead aspiring to rule like a man.
