Shalom laYehudim, Shalom laBnai Noach, Shalom laGoyim. It is the evening of the 4th day, vav beMenachem Av, Parashas Devarim, tav-shin-ayin-vav, the evening of the 3rd day, Tuesday, 9 August, 2016, webcasting from the homeland of the Jews who have forgotten that.

But let's start with some good news. Yesterday, it was reported that the government is setting up a joint task force between the Ministry of Public Security under Gilad Erdan and the Ministry of the Interior under Aryeh Deri to respond, finally, after more than a dozen years, to the hundreds of antiJews who come here dishonestly as tourists in order to harass our sons guarding our lives.

Last webcast the topic was World Vision, those lovers of Muslim children traumatized in Gaza by the Jews, if not the children of the Jews traumatized in Sderot by the Muslims in Gaza. And now the task force will make an effort to zero in on these antiJews in these NGOs who come here to provoke, to take pictures for anti-Israel propaganda, and to deport them, throw them out.

They are all, although sponsored by different NGOs, BDS-ers, which has become the latest camouflage for antisemites who want to see Israel destroyed.

If you remember, a couple of days before 9-11 in 2001 in Durban, South Africa, there was some kind of a human rights jamboree which turned into a Hate Israel Jamboree, and out of that gathering came the BDS movement, namely, the effort to do to Israel what was done to the apartheid regime in South Africa via boycott and sanctions to bring it down, to end the apartheid rule. Israel would become the next state accused of apartheid – even if in Israel there is no apartheid.

You all may remember that incident back in 2012 when an antisemitic gentile from Europe in Samaria provoked an Israeli officer rudely, who shut him up by hitting him in the mouth with his assault weapon, for which he was suspended and ultimately left the army, I think, unfortunately.

And there have been hundreds of these antisemitic provocateurs who come here dishonestly and behave in ways that in any other country they would be arrested and deported real fast. No other police force or uniformed service would tolerate the insults and harassment of these goyim.

Well, finally, it seems – let me take that back; there are probably Jews among them too -- the government is finally going to strike back, and again, as on Sunday, it seems an unholy number of these NGOs are Christian organizations like World Vision. All of them conduct training sessions in their different countries for the volunteers who are told what to do and not do, and then sent here where they receive further instructions from the Arabs how to behave in Judea and Samaria. All of them are intent on destroying Israel but play the game of “Palestinian” rights to be free of occupation. This is called the delegitimization of Israel’s right to exist, which, basically, is a frontal assault and rejection of the League of Nations Mandate that quoted the Balfour Declaration, which respected the right of a Jews to their ancient, historic homeland.

The pioneer in this antiJew NGO activity is the Ecumenical Accompaniment Programme in Palestine and Israel, the EAPPI. Its website brags that since 2002, they have brought in 1,500 anti-Israel enthusiasts, and it is all the creation of the World Council of Churches. The EAPPI proudly advertises its vision: “A future in which the occupation of Palestine has ended and both Palestinians and Israelis enjoy a just peace with freedom and security based on international law.” And our mission is to witness life under occupation, to engage with local Palestinians and Israelis pursuing a just peace, to change the international community’s involvement in the conflict, urging them to act against injustice in the region.”

Wow. “Urging them to act against injustice in the region,” but never mind what’s going on next door in Syria and in Iraq. To them, injustice in those countries committed by Muslim barbarians does not exist. These antiJew activists pay them no mind. It is what Israel does to the Balestinians in its unjust occupation of Balestine that interests them, and never mind that never in history did the Arabs, the Muslims, call this country Balestine.

This country was, as recorded by history was a barren, unpopulated wasteland before the Zionist movement. Was it 100% empty of all population? Of course not. There were towns, a half-dozen -- Jaffa, Jerusalem, Hevron, Tiberius, Tsfat, Shechem -- with a few thousand souls in each, no more, unconnected by roads. People got around in the 19th century before the Zionist movement on the backs of beasts of burden who trod on well-worn, age-old animal tracks.

But there were no cities as that term as been understood for millennia. For example, in 1905, London was home to almost 5 million people, New York was home to over 6 million, Paris, I believe, also had its millions, but Jerusalem that year? 60,000 souls, that's all, two-thirds of them Jews, only 7,000 Muslims, 13,000 Christians whose home countries were abroad.

But today these hundreds of gentiles from abroad come here in the belief the Jews are occupying land belonging to the "Palestinian people" who were absent from the League of Nations documents for 25 years, and UN documents too until the 1970s.

But Israel is psychologically paralyzed and has never been able to stand up to these antisemitic fairy tales of a Balestinian nation here victimized by the Jews, burglarized by the Jews who stole their entire ancient homeland from them.

In coverage yesterday and today about this new government effort to deport these enemy activists, we learned of other NGO operations like the AFSC, the American Friends Service Committee, the activist arm of the Quakers who are, from my perspective, a very strange bunch of people. Famous for their pacifism, when the PLO cults sprang up like mushrooms after a rain after the Six-Day War, the pacifist Quakers, who at the time were very big on opposing the war in Viet Nam, were first out of the blocks in support of these antisemitic butchers waving the flag of Balestine as they slaughtered Jews in terrorist horrors. How the Quakers juggle their allegedly pacifistic religious beliefs in order to support these savage PLO monsters is beyond me, but they do. The Quakers make numerous appearances in my book leading the charge against Israel in favor of the persecuted victims of Zionism.

The EAPPI website boasts of its three-months of teaching volunteers how to fool the Jews into thinking they are tourists instead of human rights crusaders. Surely, that is the role they imagine for themselves, defending the victims of the Jews who have a record abusing goyim going all the way back to Jesus.

So as I felt last webcast, I think these Christian NGOs who organize these missions to occupied Balestine should crack open their Bibles see that the Bethlehem they are likely to visit is not located in the "West Bank" or "occupied Palestine" according to Matthew, first book of Christian scripture, 2:1, but in Judea; and Judea will appear another 41 times in the book, but don't tell that to these idealistic Christians whose hearts bleed for the Balestinians whom the Jews make bleed.

Also in the list of these NGOs is the International Solidarity Movement (ISM), of Rachel Corrie infamy. Remember her? Her idiocy and hysteria about Jews drove her all the way from the Pacific Northwest to Gaza to stand in front of a bulldozer allegedly used by the Jews to aggress against their helpless, innocent Balestinian victims, and she paid for this idiocy, stupidity and hostility to the Jewish people with her life. The ISM is not, I think, church affiliated, but it too has a well-developed website and is always working on plans to deny the right of Israel to exist.

The early Zionists who believed the antidote to antisemitism was having our own country failed. I scan the websites of these NGOs, and there are supposed to be hundreds of such organizations, and I am fascinated by the amount of effort these groups make. They seem to be soulmates of Hezbollah and Hamas who also dedicate every day to destroying Israel. Hezbollah and Hamas do it in the name of Islam; these Christian and other outfits do it in the name of human rights because the Jews inhumanely mistreat and abuse the Ancient Palestinians, whom the Jews insult and discriminate against every day of the week. In their minds, the Jews are addicted to oppressing the Balestinians, minds oblivious to their own addiction to bashing Israel, bashing the world's only Jewish state, that is 50 miles across. Six million Jews surrounded on three sides by 550 million mostly Muslims and Israel is the bad guy in the region blocking peace whose injustice must be exposed to the world.

These NGOs are at one in spirit with the UN Human Rights Council, those gentlemen and women who likewise are addicted to bashing Israel as if it were the world's No. 1 human rights offender.

Imagine the proverbial man from Mars landing in his flying saucer and being taken to the United Nations where he asks, "What is the biggest problem facing this planet?" and he would be told, "The Jews in the Jewish state."

And if the man of Mars is sane, he will think people of Planet Earth are out of their minds when it comes to Jews.

Now here's a bittersweet news item from the morning papers. On July 1, you remember, Rabbi Miki Mark, h"y his wife and two kids, were riding in the family car when it was raked by gunfire. He died, and I think she is still in the hospital.

When Rabbi Miki was hit, the car crashed and flipped over, and among the first on the scene was an Arab passing by who stopped to help and free Khava, the Rabbi's wife, who was threatened with being strangled by her seat belt.

Well, that Good Samaritan, we found out today, lost his job for doing that, and the Jewish community is now working to find him work, legally, in Israel.

It is a bittersweet tale of further evidence that among the Arabs there are good individuals, of course, but too many bad people, basically psychopathic thugs. It is a culture in which dissent on basic issues is simply intolerable and deserving of death.

It was this realization virtually in a flash one night for yours truly that turned me from being left of center on Israel to right of center; the realization that these Arabs have a culture that is so different, a totalitarian society in which there is a monolithic attitude toward Jews that brooks no opposition.

In Israel and other liberal democracies that value the right to freedom of opinion, there is a spectrum running from the far right through the middle to the far left, and none of them believes it has a license to kill someone who does not share their views.

In a liberal democracy, everyone is entitled to his opinion about any and all social and political issues, but not in Islam when it comes to the Jews. I stopped being a liberal on Israel when I released that on the other side, there is no Peace Now. There are no people who basically, like Peace Now, identify with the enemy and make his case against their own people. The Jewish people has too many devotees of Palestinian Nationalism and their right to own Judea and Samaria. That is our fate. But a mirror image community of Arabs in Egypt, Syria, Algeria, etc. who make the case for Israel in the conflict does not exist and cannot exist, because anyone holding such views will be murdered, and the murderer will pay no penalty.

Here this Arab did the human and humane thing when coming upon that overturned car, and for his trouble he lost his livelihood.

For me, this bittersweet item is another piece of evidence against even thinking of surrendering Judea and Samaria to these Arabs. What is so interesting these days is that we have been witness to the disintegration of Syria and Iraq and Libya and Yemen, the demand by the Enlightened that Israel evacuate the high ground so that a new Arab state can come into being logically has an excellent chance of being as much of a failure as the rest of them.

Anyone calling for the creation of new Arab state in the region has not been following the news lately. One Arab nation created in the 20th century after another has come apart amidst massive killing, suffering and destruction – Arabs killing Arabs, not the Jews, not the British or French imperialists. Plain and simple, the Arabs are not very good at running a successful nation-state, so the idea of bringing to life a brand new one called Ancient Philistia would likely fail too, big time, and at our expense.

In fact, that is basically what happened in 2000 when the Oslo Abomination blew up into the so-called Second Intifada, a.k.a. the Al-Aqsa Intifada.

What also comes to mind in the category of boneheaded policy by non-Muslims was the decision by Pres. Bush Jr. to invade Afghanistan and Iraq with the goal of restructuring those societies to resemble the Western way of life. What a fool's errand that was.

I remember thinking at the time that Bush lacked an education in the history of the region and never learned that nobody, no conqueror, no empire ever succeeded in taming and subduing Afghanistan.

I was also depressed that he and advisors never read Elie Kedourie's famous book called The Chatham House Version named after Chatham House in London, the international affairs think tank founded ironically in 1920, the very year the UK was tasked by the League of Nations with a mandate for Mesopotamia that produced the modern state of Iraq that no longer is. Kedourie's book is a study of the British failure in Iraq thanks to the politically correct nonsense popular in Chatham House, hence the title of the book, The Chatham

House Version, which is sort of like the “Palestinian Narrative.” Chatham House remains a spiritual cousin the Council on Foreign Relations in Manhattan. Kedourie covered the Chatham House version of events that got it all wrong, and Kedourie, a scion of an illustrious Baghdadi Jewish family, knew what he was talking about.

And so today the dreamers remain on the Left from the liberal democracies who do not grasp the truth of how different Arab society is from Western society and why, therefore, the idea of a Palestinian state is a huge mistake, a pipedream. These people are not capable of running such an entity.

And speaking of Afghanistan, today the news carried word of a reconciliation there between ISIS and the Taliban -- isn't that lovely? -- who have been killing one another for some time now. But today we heard they are going to become allies. This is behavior that is so old.

In my book too, I track the intramural gang fights in the 70s and 80s between the PLO organizations, all Sunni, and those within the Shiite community in southern Lebanon fighting each other, fighting the PLO, fighting the Christians. Lebanon, like Syria created by Western imperialists, is where political parties commonly also operate their own armed militias.

That is what Hezbollah basically is. It is in Lebanon a legitimate political party with representation in the government, but it also maintains an army and uses it with no concern for the desires of government of Lebanon.

This is the Middle East. This is Araby, where the Saudis have not one but two armies. One is the official national army tasked with defending the country from outsiders, which I am sure is a helpless organization, and then there is another army defending the royal family in the event some colonels in the national army want to try a putsch.

These social arrangements are so alien to the West, that all the big ideas from the West purporting to improve society here are commonly a waste of time.

More on the good news front today was news of a lawsuit filed yesterday in Federal Court by two of the parents of the men killed in Benghazi under the direct supervision of the famous anti-terrorism fighter Hillary Clinton. They are alleging that her private email server was hacked and spilled information useful to the Arabs who killed the four four years ago. and for her behavior after the fact, lying to the families, calling them liars, causing them mental distress.

I know I am not alone but surely am at one with millions of people who care about the US and depend on its health as a society who are sick at heart at the reality of two candidates for president who should not be there.

I have had a hard time digesting the Sunday morning TV interview a week and a half ago done on FOX, Chris Wallace with Hillary Clinton, in which it was plain for the whole world to see this woman lying about FBI director James Comey's public testimony about her. It almost leaves me speechless that today in the global village envisioned by Marshall McLuhan that has come to life, here was this woman lying before the entire planet and worse, since then, life goes on as if nothing happened.

They say Trump gave a serious speech on economics the other day but I think he is taking the wrong tack. This is the same fatal mistake made by Mitt Romney in debating Obama. He traded policy ideas when all he should have done was nail the guy for his obvious character flaws: his bowing to the king of Saudi Arabia; his calling Ft. Hood workplace violence; his lies about American history in his speech in Cairo; his paper thin political career absent all achievement. What did he do for his constituents all those years in the Illinois State Senate? And what did he do in his three years in the US Senate?

I think Trump should focus on this woman's character and bring up how she was fired in the 1970s from the Watergate investigation; how she abused the women who had been sexually abused by her predatory husband. Trump has to go after her and the shameless, naked corruption of filling her foundation's coffers with monies from governments she was dealing with for the United States as Secretary of State.

He should say it is hard to know what is worse: the setting up of a private server for her corrupt private affairs, or her lack of understanding what a dangerous thing that was to do for the United States. In a way, her corruption loses out to her monumental incompetence as a leader in foreign affairs if she did not have the sensitivity to the need for secure communications.

This woman's character, her constant lying, make of her unfit to serve in the office created in the image of George Washington. In the America I grew in, they told us George Washington could never tell a lie, and here 220-some odd years after he took office, is this woman who cannot stop lying. I think it is virtually clinical with her. She needs some kind of psychotherapy.

And that so many Americans are ready to vote for her, leaves yours truly in despair. Who are these people? Where is there judgment? What are they thinking?

And it does not help that her rival is Trump who is a serial offender of many people unnecessarily and rudely. He has no class. He is a man of no class.

What a revolting situation this is: the reality of a country with over 300 million people and these are the two competitors for president? Something is really not functioning as it should.

The Washington Times reported last week that the original Obama plan to import 10,000 Syrians will surely go beyond that. At the current rate, by the end of next month, the number of his Muslim cohorts that he has brought in from Syria will reach 12,000, which is separate from the almost 700,000 Muslims he brought into the country and gave green cards to since taking office.

And that he has been able to get away with this is arguably no less amazing than his success as an enemy saboteur. And now he has sent 400,000 million dollars in cold cash to Iran in unmarked, untraceable bills, just what terrorists like; Iran, which publically, shamelessly declares repeatedly it is at war with the US to the death.

And there has been no one in the government all these years to stop him.

We live in bewildering times.
