Shalom laYehudim, Shalom laBnai Noach, Shalom laGoyim. It is the evening of the 6th day, z'ion beMenachem Av, Parashas Devarim, tav-shin-ayin-vav, the evening of the 5th day, Thursday, 11 August, 2016, webcasting from the Land of Israel, if not the State of Israel.

I mean, Israel has never claimed this land as rightfully belonging to the State. And so it is not at all surprising that there are gentiles out there who claim this land belongs to what they claim is the Baletinian nation.

So for three days running now, in the State Department's daily press briefing, the issue of some hovels that some Arab gentiles have set up near Sussiya, site of an ancient synagogue and a community of Jews restored, has been a topic for discussion, with other reports saying that for two weeks now, the US administration, which is a euphemism for the Muslim Obama and Kerry the grandson of apostate Jews and John Brennan who probably is also a Muslim, to threaten a harsh reaction if Israel demolishes these hovels that were set up without permission from the legal authority, which is Israel. Even the post-Jewish Leftist High Court here ruled these structures are illegal and Israel has the right to demolish them.

This is the umpteenth case like this having to do with disputed land in Judea and Samaria, and it is fascinating to be a witness time and again to the need of the goyim to dictate to us Jews where we may and may not live in our ancient homeland. They did it to us for thousands of years when we lived among them in exile, and they remain unable to shake that habit. The U.S. Administration, this euphemism for Obama the antisemitic Muslim, and Kerry, and Brennan raised 100% Catholic who seems to have converted to Islam. The three of them, plus their backers in the MSM, believe that they still have the right to dictate to us where we may and may not live. It is a way of resisting the conclusion that we really are the people we say we are, chosen by the Almighty as principle actors in the panorama of ever-unfolding history.

What, after all, is the universal, global unanimity of opinion that calls for dividing our capital and sharing it with the Ishmaelites if not another aggression against us?

At the end of this year, we are expecting to witness in Paris a multi-national gathering of dozens of nations all in agreement that the Jews must hand back what they took from the Arabs in 1967 and evacuate a half million Jews, expel them from their homes and communities, even more Jews than those who fled Spain in these very same August days 524 years ago. It will be billed as a diplomatic meeting but really, underneath, it will be a religious exercise during which the world will once again collectively point its finger of guilt at the world's only tiny Jewish state and shriek, "Racist, fascist, imperialist Jews! Give back what you stole from the Balestinians and turn those Jews living in Balestine out of their homes and into homeless refugees. The way it used to be."

But again, if we look at Jewish history and the wisdom as old as the Prophets, these goyim are just pawns in the hands of the Almighty Who uses them to chastise us and, in this case, for what? For never, ever claiming Judea and Samaria as rightfully ours. We have this coming to us.

Ironically, the post-religious David ben-Gurion still knew, when he declared statehood in 1948, that the basis for the declaration was the Bible, which contains over one thousand years of Jewish history in this Land. It is impossible for most nations today to be able to look back on a thousand years in their land.

But today's Israelis have turned their backs on the Bible as an object of legal weight in political life.

So as long as Israel persists in its refusal to fight for its rights to Judea and Samaria, its G-d given rights, the goyim will give Israel a hard time. And as we have seen recently, major chunks of Jerusalem, like Ramat Shlomo in the north, and Gilo in the south also have to be handed back to the aggressor Arabs.

It is clear from this US behavior that like all the nations, every one of them, the US also believes in the "Two-State Solution," which is a euphemism for a two-state condominium ownership of the Land of Israel west of the River because the Jews do not have uncontested real estate rights here. It means recognition of Balestinian real estate rights, which are as valid as Jewish ones. It means challenging the Bible, which makes perfectly clear that this land belongs to the Children of Israel, not to the children of Ishmael, he who was expelled in the Book from this Land.

Not that the Holy One Blessed Be Here completely disowned him. On the contrary. Ishmael received a great inheritance. He became a great nation just as G-d said he would.

The Arab world from Morocco to Iraq is larger than the United States of America and under its sands there is great wealth.

The sons of Ishmael also, using their corrupt version of the Bible, managed to spread it to many lands, to the Far East, Southeast Asia, Indonesia, Africa where the names Ibrahim, Yakub, Daoud, Suleiman, etc. are common.

Three times this week the State Department spent time on Israel's plans to exercise its sovereign power over these Arab squatters and made clear the US does not like that.

And in an unrelated but related story, seemingly in a class with this resistance, there was news from Scotland, of all places, that next week there will be a soccer match between Israel's championship team Hapoel Beersheva and Scotland's Celtic Team. There the yahoos are not planning a boycott but a much better thing to do: they will be at the game waving the flag of Balestine. Their Facebook page says, "Fly the flag for Balestine, for Celtic, for Justice." This Facebook page was the handiwork of a group called "Celtic Fans for Balestine."

Think of that. "Celtic Fans for Balestine." And I ask you, is this or is this not a group of Scotsmen what are so obsessed with Jewish rule in the Promised Land, they can't even allow themselves the enjoyment of a sporting event without being tormented their minds about what the Jews are up to. They will come to this game to exercise their hatred of the world's only Jewish state. This group would prefer Israel to be barred altogether from playing in Scotland, they say, "due to the system of apartheid laws and practices, including religious and ethnic-based colonization, military occupation and segregation of what remains of Balestinian land and over 90 laws which discriminate against indigenous Balestinians who make up 20 percent of the population of present day Israel."

Oh, these poor, Scottish devils. At hand is a soccer game and they cannot put aside their rage at Israel for all these terrible crimes they believe we Jews commit.

But again, in a rant like this, you can still find evidence of the underlying psychopathology characteristic of the delusional antiJew; the lies, really the delusions, of seeing in Israel, for example, a "system of apartheid laws."

But where do they see this? Where can one read the statutes and ordinances in Israel governing and regulating this "system of apartheid"? South Africa had such regulations written into law. I mean, how are the victims of this system to know what the Jews dictate to them if they are not written down, not proclaimed in public?

Also, Israel was accused of "ethnic-based colonization." Now colonies were implants of alien cultures far from the homeland to extract the local natural resources for shipment back to the homeland of the colonists. In Israel, we communities built on barren hillsides minutes from Jerusalem and Tel-Aviv where there are no natural resources to mine. These are not colonies -- if words are to have meaning. This is, perhaps, another antiJew hallucination.

AntiJews always see what is not here and are obsessed by it. This upcoming soccer match will be a time to act out their hatred, Scotsmen who share the US and the UN's view -- the world's view -- that the Jews have no right to be living in Judea and Samaria, whose "real" name is the "West Bank."

And that is another self-induced Israeli punishment. Of course, the goyim call our land the "West Bank" because the Israeli ruling class does too. And in doing so, in refusing to use the term Judea, Israel brings down on itself the contumely, the insults and scorn for occupying land that does not belong to it, that Israel has yet to claim as rightfully Israel's land.

This would also entail standing up to the fantasy of a Balestinian nation with rights to a state that our prime minister saluted in 2009, aligning himself with the morons of the Left who gave us the Oslo sickness.

It's a package deal, really. Refuse to claim Judea and Samaria as rightfully Israel's property, and you salute the right to a state in that territory for a Balestinian people, and what you get is a constant barrage of attacks from world antiJews that never ends.

* * (Musical Interlude) * *

Well, in a related story to the foregoing about Scotsmen preparing to turn a soccer match into a Jew-baiting and Jew-cursing festival, which is a much cruder but otherwise similar eruption of antiJewism found at the State Department, the latest brouhaha is the online Google map that the Ishmaelites in their eternal twisting of truth are furious over because, they protest, the name of Balestine was removed, when it truth, it was never there.

What was there were the names "West Bank" and "Gaza Strip" that disappeared, evidently, thanks to some computer glitch.

But never mind the truth, the eternal paranoia of the Arabs is at work, and it forced Arab journalists in Judea and Samaria into demanding the restoration of "Palestine" and "an apology to the Balestinian people" by the Google company.

This, of course, is their plagiarized imitation of similar Jewish protests over maps that do not contain Israel at all. Everything with this Arab people is stolen from us.

Still, since these are Arabs, the basic claim is false. Palestine never appeared in the Google map. Google says it will restore "West Bank" and "Gaza Strip," which should ignite a Jewish protest but never does. For "West Bank" is like the numbers tattooed into Jewish forearms at Auschwitz, an appellation that covers up the real Jewish name of the person to whom the arm belonged.

You should see what has happened to the Jerusalem Post in this regard. When Bret Stephens, the deputy features editor and columnist for the Wall Street Journal. was the editor a decade ago for two or three years, it was a quality newspaper. Now it is leftist crap, splattered with constant stories about people with sexual disorders covered with the euphemistic letters LGBT and with repeating stories on the people suffering from the delusional mental state of thinking they are a different sex than the sex they oblivious really are. Surely this is a delusion, when there is no medical evidence to support the patient's self-diagnosis.

And when it comes to the Arabs, JPost has become one kumbaya feature after another about Jews and Arabs playing together, studying together, as if this will bring peace. There was coverage recently of a good restaurant in Bethlehem the other day, and never mind Jews dare not go there. because they might be murdered.

Today, JPost was whining about a lack of Olympic swimming pools in Arab Judea and Samaria, as if it is Israel's responsibility. That's not Zionism. Zionism was about restoring Jewish life in Eretz Yisrael. Herzl, Ussishkin, Ahad Ha-am, etc., a slew of thinkers, said nothing of improving Arab life here.

It is the same in Gaza, by the way. Not enough pools, that is, for the population. And surely that is not Israel's doing. We left there in 2005; left two-thirds of it in 1994. And how many billions of dollars and euros have been pumped into the Strip over the years, and how many Olympic pools have JPost's beloved Balestinians built for their people there? World Vision supplied the Hamas assassins with $50 million, and now there is another case of a UN engineer in Gaza also arrested this week for collaborating with Hamas.

The Jerusalem Post over the last months fired Sarah Honig, a Friday columnist who wrote blistering columns steeped in Zionist history -- from a secular point of view, by the way. She is an old Laborite. She wrote the finest and liveliest language; it was a pleasure to read her writing. They also fired Martin Sherman. A strategic thinker, he and his acid pen every Friday week destroying the nonsense of the Left's dream of a Balestinian state as a realistic enterprise have been axed.

And of course, for JPost when it comes to the feminists driven to stand next to strange men when they pray -- now that's strange behavior -- the Women of the Wall so-called and their Reform Movement's recent demand that the government to build them ritual baths, and never mind they scorn them in the Diaspora, of course JPost is all for that too.

On Monday of this week, the Knesset Finance Committee called for spending 10 million shekels on building four mikvaot for the Reform. The language suggested the move was at the request of the prime minister who wants to "strengthen ties with Diaspora Jewry."

What was not clear in the coverage was the fact that the committee's chairman, Haredi MK Moshe Gafni, could not or would prevent the vote, but afterwards said he will launch a "world war" to overturn the decision. And of course the Jerusalem Post warmly supported the decision to give the Reform what they want in the name of pluralism -- and never mind that word comes from Greek and does not appear in the Torah.

The JP Magazine is also recently really off the charts with a new editor from the States. There have been repeating features on so-called transgenders and articles on “Palestinians” and Israelis working together in kumbaya harmony, and of course JPost always uses the term “West Bank.” And I say any Jew who uses “West Bank” and not Judea and Samaria is a Jew with a serious, psychological a.k.a. spiritual disorder.

I hope Moshe Gafni has his way and the government retreats from this destructive behavior of blessing and encouraging the Reform Movement. Setting aside for the moment, any theoretical, philosophical, theological arguments about the alleged validity of Reform as a valid movement in Judaism, the facts are indisputable that the Reform is a system of driving Jews from the Jewish people. Their intermarriage rate and its consequences are a matter of fact.

Some years ago, the Conservative movement here laid off its one paid professional for the movement. They only have a few synagogues. Over the last generation, a third of their temples in the States have shut their doors. They had to give up their midtown Manhattan office and have sold air rights over their Jewish Theological Seminary campus.

Recently, as well, I read an article on the famous, Conservative Sinai Temple on Wilshire Boulevard in Los Angeles, Rabbi David Wolpe presiding, in which he, of course, optimistically called his movement “vibrant” or something like that, but let slip the information that most of his congregants these days are Iranian Jews from that LA community, like the one in Great Neck on Long Island, established by those who fled Iran in 1979.

And this fact to me speaks volumes. Where are the children of the Ashkenazi community that built this impressive edifice in the mind-1950s, when the Conservative movement claimed pride of place? The answer is that they have gone the way of the Reform in marrying out and leaving the Jewish people behind.

How sad. But this is the story on non-Orthodox American Jewry whether we like it or not, which is why it is right in Israel to resist any inroads by these movements due to their proven record of killing off the Jewish community via their constant surrender to the demands of the non-Jewish world around them; the breaking down of walls, which willy-nilly blesses the flight of its members.

* * (Musical Interlude) * *

On the home front today, a savage Hamite with a screwdriver managed to plunge it into the upper body of an 18-year-old Semite, a yeshiva student at the Slonim Yeshiva in Jerusalem who with some friends went to visit the grave of the sect’s rabbi in the ancient cemetery on the Mt. of Olives in Jerusalem; you know, where the Messiah will appear one day, but clearly not yet. Not yet, when these savage Arabs, these savage Muslims, homicidal Hamites, call them what you will, are still around and acting like this.

The doctors say the victim will be okay.

Otherwise, as the IDF reported the other day, there has been a drastic drop in the number of murder attempts by these violent Ishmaelites. That's good. It has been very hot, and maybe that has contributed. Otherwise, there has been quiet.

There has also been a noticeable drop in the number of people around to stab. Something like 15% of the country is now outside the country on vacation abroad - which allows us to keep more of an eye on the presidential campaign in the States, a most unpalatable experience. Rather depressing.

Trump's latest clumsy verbal production about Hillary's desire to abolish the 2nd Amendment, the American right to bear arms, has triggered an embarrassing perversion of the truth by the Left. It is just unreal. The Left and the MSM have made it sound as if he was calling for using one's personal weapon against Hillary, calling for murder.. This is ultimately a statement that Donald is so stupid and as well as so evil he would in public call for murder. He stumbled again and the opposition goes crazy again. He is problematic enough for real and there is no need to launch oneself into hysterical perversions of the truth.

On top of which, Israel and the assassination of Rabin got into the mix, exhibiting another nasty antisemitic attack on the right and religious right in Israel. Again, the story is spread that before the Rabin assassination there were rallies calling for his death, when there were no such rallies.

The Israeli Left periodically insists that a rally addressed by Netanyahu featured one poster showing Rabin in a Nazi uniform or a keffiyah. And for that one incident, which has been shown to have been a GSS operation, it is said that Netanyahu saw this, approved it by his silence, and thus collaborated with the assassinations. This is all such nonsense.

And for the first time in a long time, we heard from LTF, Little Tommy Friedman got into the act. He took off on Israel like Connecticut governor Dannel Molloy and raised the specter of the Rabin assassination too. Friedman said, "Right-wing opponents of Rabin called him a traitor and a Nazi for wanting to make peace with the Palestinians and give back part of the Land of Israel."

LTF is a liar like Hillary Clinton is a liar. Rabin was not assassinated for "wanting to make peace with the Palestinians by giving back part of the Land of Israel." This intimates that his opponents don't want peace. That is why they murdered him. The truth is that everybody in Israel wants peace. It is one of the reasons I think the name Peace Now is so disgusting because it implies that if you don't agree with Peace Now and its prescription of giving the Arabs what they want, you don't want peace now, when the disagreement is not over wanting or not wanting peace but the stupidity of thinking -- as Rabin thought and Friedman still thinks -- that peace can be purchased with the spoils of the Six-Day War, when that is historical nonsense. We took possession of these spoils after we were attacked, so the spoils have nothing to do with the murderous hostility that ignited that war.

Friedman also sarcastically mocked the anti-Rabinites for thinking, “they had G-d on their side.”

No. The opposition to Rabin preached exactly what Leftist icon David Ben-Gurion preached in 1937 to the Peel Commission when that he said no one, no Jew, had the right to surrender any part of Eretz Yisrael.

In any case, Rabin was not murdered for his intentions but for the reality that he brought down on the country. The terror bombings, the suicide bombings, began almost immediately after he allowed into the country Arafat and his PLO murderers. Truth be told, I think, it was testimony to the goodness of the Israeli right that there was only one attempt on his life for all the horror he brought into the country.

In any case, this current presidential race in the States is such a downer. There was Hillary yesterday insinuating that Trump was calling for murder, and today more came out about her breathtaking corruption, though again I am uncomfortable with that word in her case. Leastwise to yours truly, corruption connotes some awareness of the corruption by the corrupt one who doesn't care that he is corrupt.

Versus Hillary, who I think is less corrupt than just someone who has no sense of right or wrong.
