Shalom laYehudim, Shalom laBnai Noach, Shalom laGoyim. It is the evening of the 6th day, yud-alef beElul, Parashas Shoftim, tav-shin-ayin-vav, the evening of the 5th day, Thursday, 15 September 2016, webcasting from Israel, where the top story today was what the Enlightened hailed as a landmark defense deal, which was not so big on inspection, and a cause for worry.

The number of $38 billion was splashed on the headlines in the newspaper today that were is promised to Israel over the next ten years, which means 3.8 billion every year vs. the current 3.3 or even 3.5 billion. Not such a big increase.

But Israel also signed off on depriving Israeli defense industries and their workforce of some of that money. Most of the current aid that Israel receives is, by American law, spent in the States but not all of it, so most is really no gift at all but a boost to American labor and defense industries, not to mention the collaboration of Israeli military engineers and minds with their American counterparts to the benefit of both countries.

Besides this innovation that has Israeli defense employees anxious, there was also in the ceremonial signing yesterday a scolding as usual for Israel. It is functionally as routine as a Sunday morning mass. Obama the liar said, "For as long as the State of Israel has existed, the United States has been Israel's greatest friend and partner, a fact underscored again today."

That is not true. The United States was not Israel's greatest friend in the beginning. For the first two decades, its greatest friend was France. The Six-Day War was fought with French arms. It was only after the Six-Day War that America became

Israel's good buddy, when the world was swept up in the amazing victory and everybody wanted to be Israel's friend at that time

Over the next year, for example, Senator Robert Kennedy led the charge in Congress for selling Phantom Jets to Israel, the first major weapons deal between the two countries. That was the start of the close relationship, and for his leadership, on the first anniversary of the Six-Day War, for pushing for the Phantoms, an Arab shot Bobby Kennedy dead.

And so Obama lied again yesterday and, as I say, there was also this functionally ritualistic scourging of the Jews with words if not whips when Obama went on to say, "Ultimately, this memorandum of understanding and efforts to advance the two-state solution are motivated by the same core US objective that been shared by all administrations, Democratic and Republican, over the last several decades ensuring that Israelis can leave alongside their neighbors in peace and security." The two-state solution indeed.

Likewise, National Security Adviser Susan Rice was also in attendance and had some words to say. She brought up the need for the two-state solution, which makes one suspect that post-election, Obama is likely to try to stab Israel in the back via the Security Council with sanctions like the ones passed against apartheid South Africa. He will, of course, claim at that time to be the most generous American president toward Israel in the matter of war materiel and other cash assistance. But, of course, what is that when compared to his gift of $150 billion to Iran and permission to build an atomic bomb to destroy Israel, G-d forbid, after Obama leaves of office?

He is likely to announce that for Israel's own good and to compensate the victims of Zionism for his generosity this month with this military memorandum, he will say the United States recognizes the State of Balestine which automatically turns Israel into a foreign, occupying force that has no right to be in the new State of Balestine.

Obama yesterday sang out about how the relationship between Israel and the US is "unshakeable," and Susan Rice said this deal will ensure that "there will always be an Israel today, tomorrow and for generations to come," and as usual I don't believe a word either of them speaks.

Obama's latest use of the expression "unshakeable friendship" with Israel has no more credibility than "If you like your doctor, you can keep your doctor."

What an interesting pair they make, Pres. Obama and his first Secretary of State Hillary Clinton who will be remembered in history as "two birds of a feather" for being similar, chronic, nonstop liars. The two of them have gone through life lying, and it is shocking how spineless the American people became when confronted by these two off-the-charts liars and influence peddlers; this traitor posing as patriotic president and this Lady Macbeth-type consumed with ambition to be as powerful as a man who will say and do anything -- lie, smash cell phones, delete files, anything -- to forge ahead and be elected the first woman president of the United States. This is a woman of no principles, no ideals, no ideas on how to improve the lives of the people of the United States.

She has had no serious accomplishments evidence of her ability to be Commander in Chief of the United States Armed Forces. In her one and only, closest event to being a commander of troops in the field, that was four years ago this week in Benghazi, she blew it, but still believes she has, to borrow from Tom Wolfe, the "right stuff" to be commander in chief. This woman is living a lie, and, not surprisingly, has been lying all her life. And it is extraordinary how many people still want to vote for her.

Like Obama, who likewise had done nothing in his life to merit his election as president. Versus his rival at the time, tortured and broken in body by the Commies in Viet Nam old John McCain, who could not compete with the big, handsome, slim, confident black man who spoke like a white man. People voted for an image.

Worse, when it became known Obama had sat for twenty years in that Church of Hate Whitey listening to Rev. Wright, who used to be a Black Muslim alongside Louis Farrakhan, I, for one, thought for sure the American voter would not vote for him now.

And boy was I surprised to discover that nobody paid any attention to this information. They voted for the man they saw on the TV screen, as today they vote for Donald Trump who they also got to know on the TV with his own reality TV show featuring his own glorious self pretending to be a successful businessman, when former Senator Bill Bradley said the other day that he thinks Trump decided to run for office to escape looming bankruptcy charges.

The American people have become zombies when it comes to judging people, judging their president, this advance man for the penetration of Islam into American life in order to ultimately take it over.

Today, we were told, Obama wants to bring in another 100,000 Syrian Arabs, excuse me, "refugees." It is America's duty, he would say - "It is who we are" -- to take in all these, mostly Muslim Arabs, and do it in the name of humanitarian assistance.

And I say, this is just a convenient smokescreen for him to insert even more Muslims into the US in order to destroy it from within.

I saw it myself, I think. Two years ago, I was in the States for my annual break and when I went to JFK for my flight back to Israel, reliable El Al, recently rated the worst on-time airline in the big leagues, informed us there would be a four-hour delay, thank you very much.

So I headed for the waiting room and there was a mob, hundreds, of all kinds of Muslims in their native dress, and I thought this is the future, thanks to this enemy of Americans in the Oval Office.

Which brings me to the link posted for this webcast. When we break for the first musical interlude perhaps, open another browser and download this link, this article posted by the excellent Sultan Knish on President Teddy Roosevelt, who in the first decade of the 20th century expressed his views of Islam and polygamy, and try not to weep over how much the country has changed since then and not for the better when it comes to Islam.

It turns out that TR was very much in the mold of a contemporary in England, albeit a few years his junior, Winston Churchill. In 1905, as Sultan Knish tells us, Roosevelt he expressed himself on Islam though Sultan Knish omitted the circumstances, namely, the Perdicaris kidnapping in Morocco at that time, an American citizen who was held as a hostage there, caught up in local affairs, and Roosevelt sent warships to threaten major violence if he was not released.

Anyway, what Churchill had to say about Islam is in my book and Roosevelt was very much like him. Check out this piece of history and see what the great Republican president TR had to say about Islam, about polygamy, and the necessity of blocking the entry into his beloved USA of people who do not participate in American culture, who do not share its feelings beliefs and its disgust, his term, for polygamy.

* * (Musical Interlude) * *

Yes, this Obama guy is a menace. Under the cover of humanitarian assistance, he will have imported into the United States during his eight years in office some one million Muslims, none of whom is looking to shed his Muslim identity and adopt an American attitude toward life. Islam knows only one way to deal with people who are not Muslim and that is to be their overlords. Islam means “submission” and the whole world must ultimately submit to the truth and the rule of Islam.

Historically, immigrants to America, besides looking for a better material life, wanted liberty and freedom from discrimination often for their religion. America became not only a haven for Jews abuses by Christians and Muslims but Christians abused by Christians. Huguenots, French Protestants abused by Roman Catholics; Roman Catholics abused by Protestants; Protestants abused by Protestants. In Jefferson’s time, Quakers could not spend the night in Virginia. Protestants like the Church of England whose treatment of the Puritans led them to flee to Massachusetts Bay.

Some historians say it is mere coincidence that the first phrase of the first amendment to the Constitution, the first of the Bill of Rights, mandated the absence of a government office regulating religious life because most of the former colonies, now states, had had an official church that varied from colony to colony. The Framers of the Constitution decided to do away with that institution altogether. Because there were literally dozens of Christian sects, having no office of religion, no official religion (church), would be better.

But yours truly is not a normal American historian, so I disagree. I don't think it was an accident. I see the hand of Hashem at work, which made for the "no establishment of religion clause" that is so misunderstood in our time.

In any case, the amazing tolerance in America between different faith communities is treasured by all. Islam, though, these Muslims Obama is flooding the country with, know nothing of this value.

No less a horror on the horizon will be the sexual attacks on American women by these Arab Muslim immigrants. This man Obama is a malefactor of major proportions, the likes of which the world has rarely seen. He is the greatest secret agent in history to penetrate to the wheelhouse of the enemy ship of state, seize the helm and drive it onto the rocks.

So I hope you all read this wonderfully informative story from Sultan Knish about Muslims and polygamy a hundred years ago-plus, how Americans thought a century ago and how different the population is today.

And how similar this situation is to life in Israel today where there is a distance between the people here a century ago when thinking of Muslims.

On Monday, Minister of Education Naftali Bennett spoke in Caesarea at a 40th anniversary meeting of the TALM Education Fund which is a Conservative Movement Program directed at Jewishly ignorant Israeli Jews, to give them a taste of something Jewish, who said Israel should not only excel in hi-tech. A year ago, he announced greater emphasis on mathematics and science for everyone. This time he said that in addition to hi-tech, engineering and science, Israel should also excel spiritually and that means greater emphasis on teaching the basics of Jewishness, the Jewish religion. He said, "As a hi-tech powerhouse that exports knowledge and innovation to the entire world, we must also be a spiritual powerhouse and export spiritual ideas to the whole world as we did in the past. This is the next chapter of our Zionist vision. This is how we will return to becoming a 'light to the nations.'"

Very nice, and, not surprisingly, the far left Meretz MK Michal Rozin said Jewish studies, citizenship and Jewish heritage are important but Bennett's interpretation of Jewish studies would only come from" the Orthodox perspective which would teach religious coercion, nationalism and intolerance."

And there you have it, ladies and gentlemen, the non-religious, namely anti-religious view of classical Jewish ideas and behaviors that have kept this people alive like no other in history. For such types, classical Jewishness preaches "religious coercion." That is a lie worthy of Obama and Hillary.

Michael Rozin also says the Orthodox teach nationalism, as if that is a terrible thing. This is a sign of the contemporary, underlying, egocentric narcissist who hates large group identities because that very identity impinges on their sense of total freedom and lack of responsibility for others in their universe.

Nationalism is the highest form of social organization. First, there is a couple, Adam and Eve; then offspring that form a family. Then there are extended families, clans, tribes, provincial identities and ultimately a nation that embraces all of them.

It took four and more centuries for all the peoples of the Europe as we know them in our generation to congeal as nation states. It is apparently in the nature of things that man develops to this highest form of social organization called a nation.

Only leftists like Michal Rozin think that they know better than nature, the nature that HaShem has created. Thus did Leftists also decide that the family unit was inherently oppressive. Friedrich Engels, Marx's collaborator, wrote a book on the family and its power structure so that in Israel, in the kibbutzim, the wise men and women of Socialist Zionism decided it was better to remove infants from the care of their parents and turn them over to the collective. The collective would raise them.

Never mind that the institution of the family is truly multi-national, transcultural, international and even found among many animals.

The Leftists know better, though, and here is MK Rozin fearful of teaching nationalism to Israeli children, as if it were a bad thing. It leads to, in her mind, hating others, like the Ancient Palestinians victimized by her countrymen.

Once upon a time, the Left stood for certain economic ideas. Today it is just more narcissism characteristic of a nation in decline.

Last week, Arutz Sheva reported that on J-TV, which started last February in London, the head of the Henry Jackson Society there, interviewed spokesperson for Btselem Sarit Michaeli, who refused to call Btselem a terrorist organization. Playing some kind of stupid word-game, she said Hamas has, yes, committed terrorist attacks but that still does not make the organization as a whole terrorist.

In my book, I cite a Communist Jew here almost a century ago after the massacre in Hevron who said a revolution, meaning the Arab resistance to Zionism, sometimes needs a pogrom to make progress.

Lord have mercy.

* * (Musical Interlude) * *

Speaking before of the antiJew Jewess, the Israeli Sarit Michaeli, another antiJew Jew was in the news last Thursday. At Georgetown University's prestigious School of Foreign Service, there was a panel discussion, though its title was absent for the one report of it by historian Rafael Medoff, Dennis Ross the famous Peace Processor who never succeeded processing any peace, opined that Prime Minister Netanyahu should be taking steps toward peace “even though negotiations with the Palestinian Authority won’t work now.”

Excuse me? Negotiations won’t work now, but he wants to see Bibi taking steps toward peace, but he is not doing that? He said Netanyahu does not want to “make the difficult choice between his domestic interests and what the international community expects.”

What an empty and stupid thing to say. Bibi must make the difficult choice between domestic interests -- like presumably defending his people from a wilderness of Muslim maniacs that surround us and what the international community expects. Dennis, of course, supports what the international community holds in high regard: the eviction of a half-million Jews from homes and communities that they built and paid for. Dennis obviously thinks the expectations of the international community are superior to Bibi’s, what shall we call them, domestic, parochial interests of protecting the country.

And I find it fascinating how Ross, this international affairs expert, does not know that there is no such thing as the international community. There are only individual states out for themselves with no allegiance to an imaginary international community.

Medoff reported, “Ross took particular issue with the existence and expansion of Israeli settlements in Judea-Samaria and the Jordan Valley, saying that Netanyahu should, “at a minimum, announce an official policy that there will be no further Israeli construction east of the security barrier.”

Dennis, this is in direct contradiction to the Oslo papers that you so loved 23 years ago on the White House law according to which the life of Jewish people inside the already existing communities would not be disturbed or curbed. And that means, after 23 years, there is a new generation of toddlers in these communities who need more classrooms, and of more medical clinics and markets, etc. What Dennis Ross was proposing, if followed, was a duplication of the Warsaw Ghetto that was so inhumanly packed with Jews driven from their homes. Dennis proposes no building for these growing Jewish communities.

Twice, Medoff reported, Ross said, “Israelis need to realize that they can’t get peace on the cheap.”

Translation: they must pay for it, buy off our neighbors who applaud when their youth murder our youth. Israel must pay for peace, he said, when the truth is exactly the opposite. With people who demand what these savages demand, there can be no peace, because they are not interested in peace, just thievery and the pleasure of bleeding Jews and making them cry. Like an extortionist who comes back to his victim who paid him the first time, Arabs demanding payment of peace will break the peace when they want more from their pigeon who submits to their blackmail.

Ross also said that Obama sees himself as “a genuine friend of Israel, the kind of friend who does not let his friend drive drunk.”

Yes, Dennis, Bibi is a drunken driver but his good friend Barack Hussein will take care of him and make sure he does the right thing because Barack Hussein loves Israel and knows better.

Dennis Ross is a fool, a contemptible betrayer of the Jewish people and above all just plain stupid to say and believe the things that he does.
