Shalom laYehudim, Shalom laBnai Noach, Shalom laGoyim. It's the evening of the 4th day, kaf-khes be-Mar Khezhvan, Parashas Toldos, taf-shin-samech-tes, the evening of the 3rd day, Tuesday, 25 November, 2008, webcasting from the "Palestine" the Arabs denied for 13 centuries until the Jews fixed it up and made it desirable again.

I cannot describe to you what it feels like to be working in the evening on my book on the invention of the "Palestinians" (which basically will be a history of the Zionist movement over the last century-plus and the invention of this propaganda technique), specifically on a chapter concerning the 1920s and 30s, as I was last night; to sleep through the night then awake to a morning in which one of the headlines in the Jerusalem Post is "PLO declares Abbas President of the State of Palestine." (And the reason for that we'll get to later on).

How strange it was to read that after delving into events here in the 1920s when the Arabs murdered hundreds of Jews and British officials in an attempt to prevent the creation of Palestine, which in black and white, according to the plain language of the League of Nations Mandate to the UK, was to create a Jewish homeland as its purpose. At this point in the history of this Land in the 1920s, the Arabs here had no conception of Palestine. From time immemorial they had called this area Bilad as-Sham, which freely translates "Damascus territory," territory in the penumbra of Damascus. In the 1920s, only Jews and Christians had a mental picture in their minds, found in history books and Bibles and atlases and encyclopedias, of the size and shape of the Holy Land a/k/a Palestine. But the Muslims and Arabs never did.

In their Qur'an, there is no Palestine, only the geography of the Hedjaz where the central narrative takes place, the coastal region along the Red Sea in the Arabian Peninsula that is home to Mecca and Medina. Actually, the Holy Land is spoken of, if not explicitly, in the Qur'an in verses directed at the Jews reminding them of the promise by Allah to them of their Holy Land.

For sure in the Qur'an there are no "Palestinians," not one.

And indeed in 1917, when British forces under General Allenby invaded Palestine and drove the Turks out, they came across Turkish maps of the region with no outline of Palestine on them at all, only Turkish administrative lines for a large vilayet/province or a smaller district called a sanjak. The Muslims, when looking at their maps, did not see any "Palestine," only southern Syria.

And in fact in 1919, following the Paris peace talks which mandated the resurrection of the Holy Land to be called Palestine as a homeland for the Jews, Arab leader Haj Amin al-Husseini, the Arafat of his day, established a newspaper with that name, Southern Syria, whose purpose as a newspaper was to preach the line that there was no "Palestine"; that Jerusalem is located in southern Syria. And that it is wrong to convert southern Syria into Palestine, i.e. a country that may have meaning to Jews and Christians but is of no importance to Muslims - which is one main reason why under 14 centuries of Muslim domination, Palestine was largely an uninhabited wasteland due to Muslim neglect - neglect being a sign of not caring about Palestine.

Yet here we are two biblical generations of 80-plus years later, and the PLO, the Palestine Liberation Organization yesterday, declared that Dr. Mahmoud Abbas is the president of Palestine. And the reason for this declaration was an attempt by Fatah to head off a January 9th attempt by Hamas to declare its own president.

I'm telling you the Holy Land is such a powerful force it makes men crazy, drives them out of their minds. These Arabs - and the whole world that humors them - are living in a dream world. There is no Palestine to be president of. In 1988 in Algiers, the Palestine National Congress declared, "We have a state!" and their president was Yasir Arafat - and never mind that international law recognizes statehood when declared by a group of people inside a country claiming sovereignty over territory they control and want to be independent in.

It cannot be done long distance, and the PLO to this day controls no territory. So what is going on here with these Arabs using the language and offices of statehood when they don't have a state?

You know, there are two numbers which recur in the press associated with Arab Muslims: one is the number 22 which is the number of member-states in the Arab League of States, but since one of them is Palestine, in truth, in reality, there are only 21 Arab states.

Likewise the Islamic Conference of States claims 57 members, the MSM tells us, because that is what the Muslims tell the MSM. But again one of these Muslim states is the phantom, non-existent Palestinian state, so the true number is 56.

This mental hoax of the last generation since the Six Day War of a "Palestinian" nation has been a form of psychological warfare unique in human history for its size, practical effects and success. It is such a violation of the truth, it leads from one ridiculous act of delusional nonsense to another; to people acting in surreal ways. Like humoring this character Abbas, this murderer, as if he is the president of a state.

Today in JPost their Khalid Abu Toameh covered this story and unthinkingly - like everywhere else in the MSM - called Mahmoud Abbas "President of the Palestinian Authority" when in truth his party in 2006 was voted out of office. It is the Hamas Party that won that election pressed for by the famous Middle East expert Condoleezza and Middle East expert from Georgia, James Earl Carter - and thus it is a corruption of democracy worthy of a dictatorship to go on calling Abbas the president of the PA and meeting with him as the president.

In 1992, after four years of serious unrest in Algeria, the Commie dictators of the FLN were pushed by social unrest into holding democratic elections, only to wake up the next day to find they had been voted out of office big time by the Islamists, which meant the FLN then had to turn over the government to the Islamists, which not only did it not do, it also cancelled the elections it had called. The FLN called the elections, did not like the results, invalidated them, and the rest is history. What followed was fifteen years of major violence Arab style - 200,000 people, not soldiers, but ordinary people, butchered in terrorist atrocities.

And here in the Holy Land after 2006, Condi and Ehud and Tsipi did not like the results of the elections they had called for and acted in the same way.

What a joke. The Bush and Condi policy here in the Middle East has been to wave the banner of democracy, yet here they were crapping on their own invention, when the Arabians here voted for the Islamist lunatics to lead them.

It has been lunacy, I believe, since 1993 just to deal with the PLO, with criminal slime like Arafat and Abbas, if only for reasons of common sense. Set aside for the moment the immorality of cleansing these mass murderers of their sins: it is just stupid because they are not men who keep their word. Besides being mass murderers, they are also highly likely to be liars, chronic liars who cannot be trusted.

That was Oslo and is still Oslo, as Israel and the West continue to try to work out a deal with this evil man Abbas, who yesterday was declared President of the State of Palestine.

This is Alice in Wonderland, humoring these Arabs with being “Palestinians” who have rights and justice on their side.

Yesterday and today in New York City on First Avenue, in the glass temple of world diplomacy for the nations of the earth, the General Assembly of the Goyim, the United Nations General Assembly held a yearly event when the day’s activities are given over to a stream of speakers reveling in the opportunity to bash the world’s only Jewish state for its Nazi-like, racist, apartheid persecution of the Ancient Palestinians. It is a day, two days really, to pelt the Jews with verbal mud balls and balls of verbal excrement of guilt for their behavior as ugly as any done to them.

Jewish history has been a tragedy in the classical sense if not in the way the word is misused in our time. Today people call fatalities in a car accident a “tragedy,” hinting of happenstance, the fickle finger of fate, when classic tragedy grew out of religious rituals in ancient Greece modeled on Yom Kippur’s sacrifice of the goat to Azazel, the so-called “scapegoat” who bore all the sins of the community as it was driven into the desert and off a cliff to its death.

The ancient Greeks devised rituals, dramatic re-enactments, involving the sacrifice of a goat – sometimes putting it on a raft and floating it away from the town. And in classical Greek the word for goat is tragos, whence the very word “tragedy.” And these little rituals with their own texts would evolve into the tragedies of the theater whose stories often concerned a clash between man and a god.

And as the great theoretician of the art of the tragedy, Aristotle, the Greek Rambam, explained, the purpose of the tragedy was the purging of feelings of pity and fear.

The purging. Purging indeed, evacuating being one of the least pleasant features of human life, which is then flung at the Jews.

Yesterday at the UN, the president of the General Assembly of goy nations Miguel D’Escoto Brockman played his role in the ritualistic Jew-bashing. He smeared Israel from the podium with the word apartheid, a synonym for racial discrimination, cruelty and exploitation in the case of the Ancient Ones.

Interesting name, Miguel D’Escoto Brockman. He is an ordained Roman Catholic priest who imbibed anti-Jew Roman Catholicism, who then began to preach Marxist-inspired Liberation Theology since the 1960s. As a Marxist he was also then imbued with anti-Jew ideology.

But he has this Jewish name, a Hebrew name, Miguel being the Spanish mispronunciation of Mikhael. And Brockman as a last name might suggest he has a Jewish background. Maybe, who knows, like Barry Goldwater and Casper Weinberger, whose paternal grandfathers were Jews, so were Brockman's, which would help to explain his rabid attachment to one antiJew ideology after another. Roman Catholicism, Marxism, and now so-called Palestinian Nationalism.

In any case, this Commie Sandinista was at it again yesterday smearing Israel with the word apartheid. In other words, for Brockman and like-minded goyim, nothing has changed at the UN since 1975 when this very same General Assembly voted to define Zionism as a form of racism. And never mind that in 1991 the GA voted to annul the earlier resolution. It was an absolutely meaningless gesture, because it obviously had no effect on Brockman and his entire block of Arab leftist haters of Western civilization.

In 1975, the UN General Assembly threw a ball of excremental guilt at the Jews. And it stuck, and since then nothing has changed. Our foolish, shallow, uneducated deJudaized leaders of Israel, Peres and Rabin, thought in 1993 that if they hand over Yesha, the Arabs would have a change of heart – because these Enlightened post-Jews are insensate when it comes to the psychological depths of the hatred of Israel and not only by the Arabs but all anti-Jews, Jewish and non-Jewish alike. Like Zbig Brezinski and James Baker and Brent Scowcroft, whose antipathy to Jews is rooted in hatred far older than the modern Zionist movement or anything Israel has ever done.

At the UN yesterday, the so-called foreign minister of the PA – this is more delusion about already having a state – one Riad Malki, read a statement sent by “Pres.” Abbas in order to participate in the International Day of Solidarity with the Palestinian People, which he did by bashing the Jewish state for its alleged crimes against the Ancient Ones. It would have been unthinkable for the president of the Palestinian Authority – doubly a lie - not to participate in some way in the proceedings, which again mostly involved tongue-lashing the Jews.

Abbas said in his statement that Israel is intentionally blocking the peace process by not discussing so-called final status issues, such as who owns Jerusalem. By not doing that and not agreeing to cede sovereignty of Jerusalem to the Ancient Ones, the Jews were intentionally blocking the peace process. That was the drift of the murderer's remarks.

Most years at this time (for some reason not this year) the two-day Israel-bashing festival is held on November 29, because that was the day in 1947 the General Assembly voted on the third partition of Palestine which would have created another Arab state in, more or less, today's Yosh.

But the Arabs rejected it. And pointed out yesterday by Israel's new ambassador to the UN Gabriella Shalev – good for her - was the irony (I would call it lunacy) of dedicating the day to the absence of a state for the so-called Palestinians, which leads to all this Israel-bashing, when on this day in 1947 the Zionists agreed to such a state - versus the Arabs who rejected it. That's how crazy our world has become by the absorption into our discourse and view of the situation this fantastical invention of “Palestinians” and their “narrative.” It leads to such absurdities.

The decision to inaugurate this annual Jew-bashing festival of solidarity at the UN was taken in December of 1977, some nine months after the brand new antiJew American Pres. St. James of Plains, a mere two months in office, declared his support for a “Palestinian” state – which went against the solid Israeli consensus at the time. In March that had been cause for an uproar.

And then in December, the UN decided it would hold a day of solidarity with the newfound, unheard-of-before 1970 at the UN “Palestinian” people, who on that day in 1947 suffered a terrible injustice when the very same body decided to partition the rump of Palestine into yet a fourth Arab state with a piece of Palestine – after Lebanon, Syria and Jordan - and one Jewish state - finally. Although the Mandate given to the UK was to make Palestine into a Jewish homeland, by 1947 after the Brits had never done that, the Jews wound up with only 11% of the original map.

That Partition Plan vote was the immediate trigger for the events the following spring when Israel declared independence on the very same day the last British officials departed the country, which led to war and Israel's survival and victory, and the flight of some 590,000 Arabs who ran from the fighting that erupted after Arab armies, some from hundreds of miles away, invaded to destroy the Jewish state on the day of its birth, which the Arabs now call the catastrophe/Nakba.

Take my word for it - this is more propaganda. There was no nakba. This is just more propaganda divorced from historical truth; it is a perversion of historical truth.

Were there not many Arab refugees, one might ask? There were. There is no denying the truth of their flight.

But that was no nakba in the way the Arabs conceive of it as a parallel persecution to the Jews' Holocaust. The Arabs deny the Holocaust because it turns the Jews into objects of pity who are worthy of compensation. They deny it because it gives the Jews power over others, for example, forcing the UN General Assembly to vote in its majority as it did on November 29, 1947.

Ishmael, the Torah teaches, was a thief who robs others of their wealth, and in inventing the "Nakba," the Arabs are once again stealing from the Jews. As the Philistines, not understanding Judaism but well aware of the power of the Jews, stole the Ark of the Covenant as if it were some magical object, so today so-called Palestinians want a holocaust of their own with which to beat the world over the head as they demand exactly what the Jews got: a state in Palestine.

Only the analogy doesn't hold. What happened to the Jews in Europe was "punishment" for crimes they never committed. The hatred of Jews shared by many Europeans along with the Germans had no basis in sane, rational reality. The Jews were no threat to Germany in any way. Yet Hitler, this maniac, perceived them as such a threat he had to kill them. The Jews were truly innocent victims guilty of no crime against the Germans or anybody, the Austrians, Lithuanians etc. who butchered them.

Versus the Arabs here who ran away. For sure many of them had never harmed a Jew. But likewise many Germans in Germany during the Allied bombing of all those cities likewise never harmed anybody either.

The Jews during the Holocaust were no threat to anybody, but it cannot be said that the Arabs here in 1948 were no threat to the Jews. If some Arabs here suffered in 1948, well, there were ordinary Germans who also suffered during World War II.

But they, the Germans, have no concept of a nakba, a story in which they were like the Jews, innocent victims. One would have to be psychotic in Germany not to see the connection between Hitler's aggression and the Allied countries' self-defense which resulted in all of that suffering. And no one in Germany does that.

It has, unfortunately, become the fashion in Germany in recent years to believe the Allies committed war crimes in their assault on Germany in their self-defense. But that is light years away from denying that the Nazis were the aggressors who started it all.

This business of Nakba is more intellectual, indeed, spiritual property theft, an attempt to turn the Arab refugees of 1948 into a population as innocent as the Jews had been during the Holocaust.

It is a form of denial in league with Holocaust Denial. The very idea of a Palestinian Nakba is a form of historic denial of the truth about those days.

In the Knesset yesterday, we got an inkling of an answer to the mystery of why Israel has not attacked Gaza. During his time on the podium, in a rare appearance before the full Knesset, Defense Minister Barak praised the tabdiya, the lull in the fighting, its violations, the occasional flare-ups of rocket fire in recent weeks, notwithstanding, because it has allowed Israel, he said, to prepare, giving it greater flexibility of action regarding Iran, Syria and Hezbollah. He said, "This is too serious a subject for political argument."

He was of course responding to charges that he is not attacking Gaza because he wants to be elected prime minister in February.

So the reason for the non-response by the IDF seems to be as conjectured by yours truly: the IDF does not want to get bogged down in Gaza when far greater threats loom on other horizons.

Indeed, our strategic situation begins to remind me of the plight of the Israelites the night they fled Egypt and found themselves cornered, back up against the Sea of Reeds, with no escape until the Holy One Blessed be He rescued them by parting the sea. Barak in his address reported that whereas in 2006 when Hezbollah fired over a third of its inventory of rockets at Israel for over a month, today its inventory is three times larger. And as far as I know, Israel has no defense against a Hezbollah decision to rain down on us a torrent of missiles three times worse than before.

The only deterrent Barak has alluded to is making the government in Lebanon aware that this time Israel will not confine its air strikes to Hezbollah only, since the government has made Hezbollah a legitimate partner and participant in the governing of Lebanon.

But I wonder how much of a deterrent that is when Hezbollah is nothing but the Iranians in disguise who don't give a hoot about Lebanon and its infrastructure, which is a country, in Iranian Shiite eyes, corrupt for its too Western-like lifestyle, with Christians having any political power at all. What does Iran care about Lebanon?

Hezbollah is a front organization for Teheran, and so has Hamas become. These Muslims are forever hiding behind front groups and other veils.

There was good news out of Texas yesterday when the Federal government convicted the so-called Holy Land Foundation for being a Hamas front. They nailed them on all charges.

These Arabs are such thieves. The Holy Land Foundation, a wholly Jewish idea. The Holy Land never meant anything to Muslims, it was just more imperial booty, further proof of the superior truth of Islam as the "final revelation."

This is a profanation that these Hamitic murderers use the name Holy Land to disguise their Jew-killing activities; their claim to be a charitable group when it truth they are murderers, suppliers of monies to antisemitic murderers.
