Shalom laYehudim, Shalom laBnai Noach, Shalom laGoyim. It is the evening of the 4th day, vav bekbodesh Kislev, Parashas Vayeitzay, taf-shin-peh, 5780, the evening of the 3rd day, Tuesday, 3 December, 2019, webcasting from the world's obsession, the Jewish nation come back to life like Jesus and hated for that, as the Jews have always been hated.

I, for one, well, call me eccentric, call me a weirdo, but the daily news items having to do with Israel and antisemitism that never stop flowing only make yours truly smile.

This morning in the UK, on the ITV program called "This Morning," the head of the British Labour Party Jeremy Corbyn was interviewed and apologized, finally, for the scores of instances of antisemitism in the Labour Party and said he was dealing with it.

And I ask, what other religious community on Planet Earth is the chronic target of such hatred like this? How ironic that the antisemites in England, and there are many according to a poll released today, do not realize that in their hatred of the Jews for calling themselves the Chosen People, by the hatred they create us a chosen people. What other religious community is so hated and for what? I would love to interview Corbyn and ask him for his definition of antisemitism; I would really like to know, for what he did today, I think, was another example of the spiritual plague, the mental disorder in its current phase, which is the tactic of opposing antisemitism in the UK, of course. Antisemitism led to the Holocaust, as Jeremy Corbyn might say.

But the interviewer did not have the savvy to see that what he was doing was defending his right to hate the Jews, the Jews in Israel, in the same way antisemites hate Jews and murderously so.

George Galloway, another stereotypical English antisemite, pioneered this maneuver when he too said antisemitism is wrong but it is okay to hate the Jews in Israel; six million criminals who stole Balesline from the Balesinians. Every enlightened, progressive, anti-racist person knows that.

What Corbyn did today was protect his right to hate Jews like a Nazi, if not those in the UK where he opposes antisemitism. In self-defense he also said other political parties have had to expel their antisemites. This new mental gymnastic of opposing antisemitism but allowing for the hatred of the 6 million-plus Jews in Israel with the same intensity as lunatic Jew-haters have always hated us for the delusions in their heads, the imaginary crimes they fantasize the Jews commit.

Just the other day, another news item was of a rabbi beaten bloody in the street. And I ask, what other religion, nation, triggers this kind of behavior? By this behavior, the antisemites act out and make of the Jews a unique people chosen for a unique behavior; they believe they have right to attack them physically in the street. It is okay to pounce on an unsuspecting Jew and kick the crap out of him, beat him bloody.

If this morning's interview with Jeremy Corbyn had an interviewer who understood what was going on, he might have pressed Corbyn to speak about his feelings not for Jews in the UK but the Jews in Israel, constantly being slaughtered by Arab Muslim terrorist criminals, murderers to whom "You, Mr. Corbyn, have paid your respects."

And in a related but unrelated news item in Israel Hayom today, we read a new survey in the UK showing more than half of British people harboring some antiJew delusions; the lowest among this people who gave the world antiJew literature written by Shakespeare and Marlow and Dickens, 20% still believing Jews chase after money more than British people, which I think is simply daft. Lots of people wish they had more money than they do and work to get it. Such types also believe the Jews think they are better than British people.

What we are listening to there is their own response to the Chosen People chosen by G-d. The Jews remind them of the existence of G-d, and that makes them feel guilty, and they hate the Jews for making them feel guilty.

Overall, a minority of 44% of Brits polled were perceived as free of antiJewitis. Maybe you saw online today the British Hugh Grant campaigning for ex-MK Luciana Berger who literally was harassed out of the Labour Party just for being a Jewess. Hugh Grant represents the good Englishman in his attitude toward Jews and there have been many. Prime Minister in 1917 Lloyd George and Foreign Minister Arthur Balfour were two of them. So was Winston Churchill, so was Orde Wingate, so is General Richard Kemp and so on and so forth. The Brits have their antisemites but also have their philosemites. They are like Evangelical Christians today who became "woke" when they woke up to the first conversation between G-d and Abraham in which the Almighty said, “You will be a blessing,” meaning, I think, “you will be a blessing to whomever you live among.” Antisemitism is the mirror image of Jewishness. The antisemite sees Jews as the greatest force for evil in the world, when the opposite is true.

G-d says to Abraham, “I will bless those who bless you, and curse those who curse you.” And this prophesy surely came true. For example, the Germans and the Russians in the 20th century were both totalitarian, socialist dictatorships. Nazism was Black Fascism, and Soviet Communism Red Fascism, both fueled by their war against the Jews.

Yes, we suffered big time from these monster societies but look at what they did to themselves. Those who curse are cursed. Hitler came to power in 1933, and a dozen years later, 8 million Germans were dead, one city after another reduced to rubble, the country split in two, the capital occupied by four foreign nations.

And then Soviet Russia after the war, Joe Stalin was planning on murdering all the Jews in the USSR which would surpass Hitler’s six million, and this was after Uncle Joe had murdered some 27 million of his own people. People who hate the Jews hate their own people.

That 20% of the Brits harbor those old-fashioned, timeless varieties of antiJew delusions -- Jews love money more than others; Jews think they are better than others. I am reminded of the 20% of the American nation in July 1969 who did not believe the astronauts reality landed on the moon. It was all staged in a TV studio, they believed. I think it is common in all societies for the bottom 20% to be the least intellectually sophisticated in their thinking. So, I am not bothered by that 20%. Actually, I think the survey even flatters the Brits with 44% of them apparently not afflicted with classical perverse thoughts about Jews.

It is a fact that the Balfour Declaration came out of England and no other country. The English have had their strain of commonplace Jew-hatred, but also a philosemitic tradition, those who bless the Jews.

Arthur Balfour gets the credit for the Balfour Declaration which in truth is no less and even more so was the George Declaration, for without the leadership of Prime Minister David – a nice Jewish name -- Lloyd George, Balfour would not have written that letter to Lord Lionel Rothschild, the first Jewish peer in England. I think it was Lloyd George who said he knew the map of Palestine better than the map of England, and the biography of Orde Wingate supports that claim.

Popular historian Barbara Tuchman wrote a whole book on Christian Zionism in England, Bible and Sword: England and Palestine from the Bronze Age to Balfour, and Captain Orde Wingate was a prime example of the tradition. Raised in a strictly religious sect called the Plymouth Brethren, he was laughed at by the snobs in the C of E, who as the butt of ridicule for his fundamentalist sect identified with the pariah Jews. And, long story short, he envisioned himself becoming as the commander in chief of a born -again army of Jews who would fight for a resurrected Jewish state.

Wingate was a British Army intelligence officer with a competence in Arabic who was posted to mandatory Palestine in September 1936 to put down the first intifada called the Arab Revolt at the time. The only “Palestinians” at the time were the Jews. The Arabs in this decade hated the “Palestinians,” meaning the Zionist Jews bringing the desolation back to life.

When Wingate landed in Palestine, within days he had made the acquaintance of the head of Haganah in Haifa who volunteered to drive him around and show him the country. And when they entered the Jezreel Valley heading toward Beit Shean, Wingate asked his host to pull over and stop, which he did. Wingate jumped out, looked this way and that and spit out “Idiot.” His host asked, “Who? What idiot?”

Wingate still surveying the terrain, answered “Saul.”

His host asked, “Saul who?”

Wingate said, “King Saul of course” and proceed to discuss the battle between Saul and the Midianites and explained why he had pitched his camp in the wrong spot, and explained the military dimension of that fighting. He had been in the country like 48 hours and was already lecturing a Haganah commander on military strategy and tactics from long ago. He knew the geography of Eretz Yisrael inside out. And in the three years he served here -- becoming the model of an IDF officer a decade in the future -- he would drive around in his car getting to see the country first hand, and on the empty passenger seat next to him was a Bible and a loaded pistol.

So, today Jeremy Corbyn apologized in the style pioneered by George Galloway. Antisemitism at home is unacceptable but hating Jews in Israel as Nazis hated Jews is just fine.

No doubt, the raising of antisemitism’s ugly head in the UK these days is distressing. It is distressing all over Europe in Germany, France, the UK. And I, for one, feel confident that current support from now nine European states for the regime in Teheran, all of them conniving to circumvent US sanctions against that regime, whose leaders are as bonkers about Jews as the Nazi every were, is fueled to a significant degree by their age-old animus against the Jewish people.

France, Germany, the UK were the villainous founders of what they call, with a fancy-shmancy name, what they created in 2018 when President Trump tore up the so-called Iran Deal, the Instrument in Support of Trade Exchanges; for short, INSTEX. On Saturday, they welcomed into their cabal Belgium, Denmark, Finland, the Netherlands, Norway and, and Sweden in order to continue doing business with Iran whose mad mullahs stage “Death to America!” and “Death to Israel!” rallies.

And that they did this as hundreds of Iranians have already been killed protesting the regime because the sanctions have made their lives even more miserable under the tyranny of these medieval Muslim priests who are not at all like clergymen in the JudeoChristian West. In the West, the last war-mongers in society shrieking for war are the clergy: Christian priests and ministers and rabbis, vs. Islam where their clergy are preachers of hatred of all infidels, hatred of Israel, hatred of America.

Israel’s Foreign Ministry published a statement asking what kind of a message were these countries in Europe sending to Iran by supporting the regime instead of rebuking the regime for its brutal, criminal response to the protests these past days.

Danielle Pletka with the American Enterprise Institute said, “Europe continues to pretend that it is serious about Iran and nuclear proliferation but proves once again that it isn’t. Overlooking Iranian malfeasance is a feature not a glitch in Europe’s foreign policy.”

So true, these want to do business with Iran, yes; with their crippling social welfare budgets, they need the money.

But I cannot dismiss as a major factor Europe’s age-old hatred of the Jewish people. They are unmoved by an Iran that publicly speaks and jokes about dropping an atomic bomb on us; an Iran that finances as well the missiles fired at us from Gaza. The Iranians are cruel people.

That was the message to my cousin in 1979 inside the US Embassy in Teheran from his Iranian secretary as it was being overrun. She began to cry, and he tried to calm her down and said, “It’ll be all right.” And she said, “You don’t know how cruel my people can be.”

The Iranians have been behind the killing of hundreds of US troops, and the news here is of constant conversations these days between Prime Minister Netanyahu and Secretary of State Pompeo and President Trump about Iran. The PM wanted to meet with Trump him in London today at the NATO conference but scheduling would not allow, so they are going to meet in Portugal this week, and the word is that Iran is the principle topic.

For a couple of weeks now in Israel, the possibility of a serious clash with Iran has been reported to be rising. A series of IDF reports to the media have discussed the possibility of serious damage done to us from Iranian rockets, as if they are preparing the home front.

For sure, the Iranians are feeling victorious in their technologically successful destruction last September of half of Saudi Arabia’s oil infrastructure, and for sure they know how Iraq bled and terrorized them with its missile barrages into downtown Teheran in 1988, and Iraq’s SCUD missile attacks against us in 1991, and surely are unconstrained by any sense of civilized ethics that make a distinction between enemy combatants in uniform and enemy civilians. For Muslims, war is mostly not about the clash of armies but just killing the enemy's people. This was Hitler's ethical system when terror bombing the Brits with V-1 and V2 missiles fired into cities at random, which then licensed the Brits and the Americans to bomb and destroy German cities.

Prime Minister Netanyahu on Sunday uploaded a video of himself to YouTube in which he virtually begged the Europeans to join the US in its sanctions program that President Trump set in motion after he tore up the treasonous Obama-Kerry deal with Iran in 2015, in which they sent tribute as in Barbary Pirate days, 150 billion dollars to Iran, and signed on the dotted line that six years from now, it will be just fine if they build all the A-bombs they want.

In Washington, people await the report by Michael Horowitz, Inspector General of the United States Department of Justice on the role of the department in the fake accusation of Trump as Russian agent, and no less the criminal investigation by Attorney General Barr and John Durham, which anti-Obama-ites like yours truly hope will expose the guilt for this abomination as reaching all the way to the top, as it should, into the Oval Office, and reveals the true traitor to the US, the Communist Muslim Brotherhood agent Imam Barack Hussein.

He and John Kerry and others all deserve a firing squad.

Yes, in this evening's webcast, and not for the first time, I spent some time with the subject of antisemitism which the secular Zionists did not understand, in particular the Leftists who believed the Jews had it in their power to put an end to antisemitism by creating a New Jew -- that was their proud invention -- who would be so different from the religious Jews of history the gentiles would not hate the New Jew.

Uncle Shimon said Zionism meant normalizing the life of the Jewish people, and for his messianic, visionary Oslo Peace Process so pleasing to the New York Times and Barbara Streisand, Shimon was showered with 60 million dollars as an endowment for his Peres Center for Peace that organizes conferences with speakers opining on peace between Israel and the Palestinians -- these kaffeeklatches. And besides the conferences, the only thing I have heard the Peres Center for Peace doing is organize soccer games between Israeli Jewish boys and Arab Muslim boys -- Uncle Shimon of course called them Palestinian boys -- in an effort to show to the boys on both sides that the boys on the other side were just like them. This was the way to peace.

And never mind the text of the Koran and 14 centuries of the abuse of Jews by the Muslims.

And as evidence of my view that the hostility to us has never been rooted in what Jews do but wells up in the souls of antiJews from their feelings about this people and their essential belief that the G-d of Israel exists, the Jewish Press website yesterday reported on a survey of students at UC Berkeley a.k.a. UC Berserkly. 230 of them were questioned, many of them expressing deep interest in the “Israeli occupation of the Palestinian territories.” The survey was conducted by two professors who entitled the report of their findings, “Passion, ignorance, and teaching the Israeli-Palestinian Conflict.”

Bravo. “Passion and ignorance.” Great title, accurate title. Such types harbor opinions resting on their feelings about Jews which are passionate, and never mind the ignorance of these passionate anti-Israelites. And I think this goes for anti-Israelites across the board, not just students at Berkeley.

The survey contained questions over eighteen separate topics most touching on the Middle East and its variety of conflict. Those polled were asked to express their interest or lack thereof in the various conflicts. 43% expressed the highest interest in the so-called Israeli-Palestinian issue, though – pay attention -- 84% of these did not in what decade Judea and Samaria came under Israeli control; only 16% of them knew. 75% of them could not find Judea and Samaria on a map.

And when asked the size of Israel’s population, only 17% came close. Others said, 100,000? another said 150 million?

And by the way, in other material I have seen, this goes as well for the States. A jawdropping number of Americans think the number of Jews in the States is in the tens of millions.

All of which information supports, I think, my view that antiJew emotion never has anything truthful about it. It is always a psychological phenomenon rooted in the psyche, the soul of the antisemite.

Which is why I have long felt that the DSM, the Diagnostic and Statistical Manual of Mental Disorders most certainly should include antisemitism; for sure, Holocaust Denial, and no less Palestinian Nationalism which is in a class with Holocaust Denial as a corruption of historical truth.

Which is why I reject all goodwill gestures to the Arabs and would much prefer to see Israel’s public diplomacy go after the essentially irrational nature of Israel-hatred in our time, a.k.a. the cause of the “Palestinians,” a group of Arabs who have never acted as a nation. In 1948, the great Menachem Begin of blessed memory decided against going to civil war when the Left killed sixteen of his men. Indeed, I believe Mr. Begin spoke of his restraint at that time as the greatest act of his political life.

Versus the Arabs here who were offered in 1993 the moon but have never been able unify as a nation, because they are not a nation and never were a nation and certainly, they are not or capable and deserving of an independent state.
